Radio Tribute To Lindbergh

Thirty-seven Stations Will Be Solely Used in Broadcasting the National Capital's Welcome and Reception to Young Flier.

Washington, June 9 (AP).—America's huge radio machinery in a continuous eleven hour period next Saturday will be devoted to broadcasting the name and fame of the hero aviator, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

For the first time in history thirty-seven stations throughout the United States associated with the National Broadcasting Company, which announced the plan today, will be solely used for such a continued stretch to present a single event—the addresses and description of the national Capital's welcome and reception of the 25-year-old New York to Paris flier—to America's radio audience of 30,000,000 persons. The program will start at noon, the time of Lindbergh's arrival at Washington, and will close at 11 that night.

Three outstanding features will be broadcast in the radio tribute to the pilot—his welcome and decoration with the Distinguished Flying Cross by President Coolidge at the Washington monument and his addresses at the receptions of the National Press Club and the Minnesota State Society.

Another Decoration.

Another decoration has been added to the long list of honors to be heaped upon the aviator on his return here from Europe, with the award of the Cross of Honor of the United States Flag Association. Former Secretary of State Hughes will present the cross to Lindbergh, who is expected to attend the association's vesper flag services at the Capital Sunday evening. The association's citation in the award said it was "in recognition of his conspicuous service to the flag through his marvelous achievement, which has emphasized so strongly in the eyes of the entire world the hopes, aspirations and destiny of the American people as symbolized by the flag of the United States."

In Great Demand.

Although nearly every minute of Colonel Lindbergh's stay in Washington until Monday morning has been allotted to welcoming ceremonies, many patriotic and other societies which are desirous of paying tribute to the aviator will be unsuccessful in securing his appearance at their exercises. Invitations to scores of ceremonies and functions have been showered upon the semi-official committee in charge of his welcome.

But outside of two receptions on Saturday night and the laying of a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb on Sunday, together with a visit to the Walter Reed Hospital, and participation in the flag service, it is unlikely Colonel Lindbergh will attend any other affair.

DIRECTOR OF FURRIER STRIKERS STABBED

New York, June 9 (AP).—Aaron Gross, business manager of the "left wing" joint board of furriers, was stabbed and seriously wounded today when he was attacked by a dozen men who, according to the police, were "right wing" furriers.

Gross, a former official of the International union, was directing the activities of the "left wing" pickets who are on strike, when he was suddenly surrounded. One man slashed Gross behind the left ear with a piece of broken bottle and another thrust a knife into his throat.

Fifty patrolmen and three mounted policemen arrived and dispersed the crowd. Two men were arrested.

SOVIET OFFICIALS BLAME ENGLISH LEADERSHIP.

Moscow, June 9 (AP).—Soviet indignation at the assassination of the Soviet minister in Warsaw on Tuesday has turned against England almost to the exclusion of Poland.

The Soviet government has issued a communique alleging British complicity in terrorist plots and outrages in Russia, while the entire press this morning, following the tone of the government's declaration ascribing Russia's counter-revolutionary difficulties in the past few years to English leadership, directed verbal batteries against England.

Plan Regular Aerial Service

Levine and Chamberlin Plan Regular Trans-Atlantic Aerial Service—Levine Ready to Put $2,000,000 Into the Scheme.

Berlin, June 9 (AP).—Charles A. Levine declared today that he and Clarence D. Chamberlin planned a regular trans-Atlantic aerial service, using multi-motored machines capable of carrying 2,000 pounds each.

Levine stated that he was ready to put $2,000,000 into the scheme, and that both he and Chamberlin thought it could become operative within a year.

The plans envisaged by the two men who spanned the Atlantic from New York to Germany in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia would provide for regular trans-oceanic lines from America to various points in Europe.

"I am ready at this moment to put $2,000,000 into the scheme," Levine said, "because I not only believe it practicable but that it can be realized even within a year.

"We have a definite type of machine in mind, which will carry 2,000 pounds and will be equipped with more than one motor."

Chamberlin said: "The machine we intend to have built is unlike anything known here in Germany."

As part of the development of trans-Atlantic aerial lines, Chamberlin thinks floating landing places anchored in various parts of the ocean may be desirable for emergency landing, but he does not seem to attach prime importance to this feature, which has been discussed in the European press as an absolute necessity.

"The main thing," he said today, "is the constant development of more efficient machines which can carry a greater useful load in proportion to their weight. During the war we carried one pound of mail per horsepower on jumps of from 200 to 300 miles.

"Ten years later, we already carry ten pounds per horsepower on jumps of from 500 to 600 miles. That is ten times the former efficiency and shows what the possibilities of engineering development are."

Los Angeles Will Greet Lindbergh

U. S. Dirigible Will Meet Memphis Early Friday As She Nears Homeland—Will Reach Washington Saturday Morning at 11 o'clock.

U. S. S. Memphis, (By wireless to the Associated Press) June 9.—Colonel Lindbergh will be greeted by the United States dirigible Los Angeles early Friday as he nears the shores of the homeland. A request has been received from the navy department for the course and position of the Memphis for the guidance of the dirigible's commander. According to the present schedule the Memphis will arrive off the Virginia Capes at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon and reach Washington at eleven o'clock Saturday morning.

The aviator, Americans are so anxious to greet, had his first glimpse of a whale while the cruiser was plowing its way through the Atlantic yesterday. He was summoned from his quarters by telephone after the lookout gave the familiar call "There she blows!" and in record time was on the bridge to see the large bull whale spouting every few seconds. The bull was surrounded by a number of cows.

Lindbergh was pleased with the sight, saying it brought to mind a school of porpoises that attracted his attention as he was nearing the coast of Ireland on his transatlantic voyage in the Spirit of St. Louis.

Fruit cocktail, filet of beef, fruit cake, nuts, ice cream—these are some of the things the distinguished voyager had for dinner at the warrant officers' mess last night.

Explosion Kills Two, Injures 20

Truck Load of Nitro-Glycerine Explodes When Wheel Goes Into Ditch—Three Lick Hill Residences Destroyed, Others Damaged.

Butler, Pa., June 9 (AP).—Two men were killed and twenty other persons were hurt, some seriously, when an automobile truck load of nitro-glycerine exploded on the main highway at Lick Hill, five miles from Butler. Three Lick Hill residences were destroyed and 15 others damaged by the force of the blast.

Frank Greer, of Oil City, Pa., driver of the truck, and an unidentified man accompanying him, were killed. Two unidentified men, walking on the highway, were injured seriously and doctors said their chance for recovery was slight. Occupants of Lick Hill houses were injured, some seriously.

The truck, loaded with explosives, had turned from the main highway to a side road, enroute to a magazine storage shed, when the blast occurred. The nitro was to have been used in blowing oil wells. The force of the blast was felt five miles away.

Parts of the truck and the bodies of the victims were found 500 yards away. The home of Mrs. Edward Redeig, nearby, was destroyed, as were two adjoining houses. Mrs. Redeig and two of her children were among the injured. Others known to have been injured included W. D. Wonderly, Irene Long, Mrs. S. J. Turner, Sadie Arnold, Mrs. M. Walters and Nevada McFadden, all residents of Lick Hill.

Many telephone poles, carrying telegraph, telephone and electric wires, were ripped down, and gas lines were broken. Some of the damaged houses caught fire.

Lick Hill is a sparsely settled farming community. Oil well workers from the nearby region make their home in that town.

According to reports from Rouse Hill, where the truck was loaded, it contained 400 quarts of nitro.

According to eye witnesses the explosion occurred when a rear wheel slipped off the concrete into a small ditch. A hole seven feet deep and 12 feet long marks the spot where the explosion occurred.

The nitro was owned by the Producers Torpedo Company of Butler.

SAYS BRITISH WOULD HAVE WON WORLD WAR

London, June 9 (AP).—The belief that the British armies would eventually have gained the victory in the World War even if the United States had not intervened is held by Field Marshal Earl Haig, commander-in-chief of the British expeditionary forces in France and Flanders from 1915 to 1919.

Addressing the British Empire Service League last night, he strongly protested what he described as the national tendency to belittle the part Great Britain played in winning the war. He referred gratefully to the share of the Allies, but contended that although without American intervention the result might have been the same.

Berlin Continues To Honor Fliers

Populace Talks and Sings About Chamberlin and Levine—Suggest Chamberlin Return on German Warship, Berlin.

Berlin, June 9 (AP).—Feted and feasted ever since they landed on German soil after their transatlantic flight from New York, Clarence Chamberlain and Charles Levine were on the threshold today of still further honors. The enthusiasm of the country over the flight knows no bounds and organizations and individuals are vieing to entertain the airmen.

Among the many suggestions that have been made is one that when Chamberlin returns to the United States he be taken aboard a German warship, preferably the cruiser Berlin. "This honor," says the Achtuhr Abendblatt, "would show the American people more than anything else how proud Germany is over the fact that the two countries are not divided any longer by the ocean."

On Saturday the two aviators plan to fly to Potsdam in the company of leading German Air League officials. Next day they expect to fly to Vienna. They will return to Berlin Thursday, June 16, proceeding by air to Bremerhaven to meet their wives, due from New York next day.

Such enthusiasm as has been aroused over the flight is rarely seen in Berlin. From the time the fliers rose yesterday to keep their appointment with President Von Hindenburg until they returned to the American Embassy, their headquarters, to dress for an official dinner last night, they were constantly obliged to acknowledge greetings. The populace not only talks about the two Americans, but sings about them. A hastily composed ballad, sung to the tune of a well known German ditty, is heard everywhere. It begins: "Chamberlin, Chamberlin, lass dich sehen in Berlin"—Let us see you in Berlin.

Drivers Held on Homicide Charges

Following Crash of Fifth Avenue Bus and Private Auto, Resulting in Two Persons Being Killed and 30 Hurt.

New York, June 9 (AP).—With two persons dead and thirty injured, one critically, due to a collision between a crowded Fifth avenue bus and a private automobile, police today held both drivers on charges of homicide.

The bus, after striking the automobile, leaped on the sidewalk at Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street, uprooted a tree and overturned. Passengers riding on top were tossed to the street, and some were caught under the heavy bus.

James Brennan, 28, driver of the bus, told police the brakes refused to hold when he attempted to stop at the intersection and this caused the bus to swerve. The bus struck a rear wheel of the touring car, which with its three occupants was tossed fifteen feet and demolished. Robert Stites, 39, its driver, and the two other occupants were slightly injured. Brennan also was slightly hurt.

The dead are Matthew Malumphy of New York city and Clyde Bowen of Billings, Mont. Both died at hospitals last night shortly after the accident. James A. Brewster of New York is in a critical condition. All the injured are residents of New York.

Police Capture Twin Bandits

Ray and Roy De Autremont Have Confessed to Train Holdup in 1923, in Which Four Were Killed, Police Indicate.

Steubenville, Ohio, June 9 (AP).—Ray and Roy De Autremont, twin bandits, captured here yesterday for the dynamiting of a Southern Pacific passenger train near Siskiyou, Ore., in 1923, and the slaying of a mail clerk and three trainmen, have confessed, police indicated early today. The robbery did not yield them a dollar.

While refusing to discuss what transpired at a conference between detectives and the brothers, police said that the men had made a statement.

When arrested, Ray told officers he would "gladly end it all" if he could "get his hands on a gun." He did not admit his identity, however, until after fingerprints had been taken, and compared with broadcast descriptions.

The men are held under heavy guard at the city jail and will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner C. J. Boroksi here.

For nearly four years the two, with a third brother, Hugh, recently captured in the Philippines, had been sought virtually around the world, with $20,000 in rewards over their heads.

Scores of times men resembling the De Autremonts were arrested but the twins remained free until federal agents and police traced them to a Steubenville steel mill, where they had been working under assumed names and with their hair dyed in an effort at disguise. Arrested late yesterday, they admitted their identity and were held for arraignment.

Ray had married an Ohio girl, who was unaware of his real identity. He was living here with his wife and their one year old child.

The two de Autremonts, with their younger brother Hugh, who already is on trial for murder at Jacksonville, Ore., were charged with one of the most cold blooded train holdups in the memory of the west.

It was on October 11, 1923, that a Southern Pacific passenger train was held up in a tunnel near Siskiyou, Ore., the mail car dynamited, and three trainmen and the mail clerk killed.

After the train had pulled out of the little station at Siskiyou and was entering the tunnel, two men boarded the tender of the engine, covered the engineer and firemen and compelled them to stop as the engine emerged from the far end of the tunnel. There a third bandit awaited with a supply of explosives.

The trio shot down Sid Bates, the engineer, Marvin Seng, the fireman, and then pistoled C. O. Johnson, a brakeman.

E. E. Dougherty, the mail clerk, perished when the mail car was dynamited. The desperadoes were forced to flee empty handed, however, when they were unable to enter the blazing and shattered car, but postal inspectors said they left behind evidence of their identity.

Terrorists Stage Moscow Outrages

As Protest Against the Assassination at Warsaw of the Soviet Minister—Heavy Guard of Special Troops On Duty.

Moscow, June 9 (AP).—The Soviet authorities were exercising increased vigilance today as a consequence of two terrorist outrages and a huge anti-Polish demonstration staged as a protest against the assassination at Warsaw Tuesday of the Soviet minister to Poland.

From afternoon until a late hour last night the streets leading to the Polish Embassy were filled with demonstrators, but a heavy guard of special Russian troops kept them away from the building.

The bombing of a hall in which the Leningrade Communist Discussion Club was meeting Tuesday night, was followed yesterday by the blowing up of a trolley car in which a lieutenant of the Polish intelligence service suspected of espionage was being taken to Minsk from the Polish frontier. Vice-Chief Ogansky, of the state political police, and two of his assistants were killed by the explosion of a bomb which had been placed on the track, while the prisoner was seriously injured. In the bombing of the Communist club twenty-six persons, among them ten young women, were injured. The bomb throwers escaped, firing revolvers as they ran.

The Polish authorities, according to Warsaw dispatches, are doing everything possible to learn whether the murder of the Soviet ministr, M. Volkoff, was part of a Russian monarchist plot, or whether the assassin, a 19-year-old Russian student named Boris Koweeda, fired the revolver on his own impulse.

Police searches among monarchist colonies have resulted in five arrests in Warsaw and 20 at Vilna. Those taken into custody include several well known Russian monarchists.

A Russian newspaper published in Warsaw, which in a special edition called for subscriptions for the murderer, was suppressed by the authorities and the editor arrested.

Wife Held for Husband's Death

Stephen Baker is Under Charges Growing Out of Death of Byron Frasier—Says She Put Poison in Wine.

Glens Falls, N. Y., June 9 (AP).—A North Woods housewife and her alleged paramour were under arrest today as the slayers of the woman's husband.

Byron Frasier was found dead Sunday in his farm house at South Horicon in the Adirondacks. An autopsy revealed poison in the stomach, and District Attorney Beckwith drew from Mrs. Alice Frasier, it is said, an admission that she put the potion in wine her husband drank.

Today Mrs. Frasier and Stephen Baker, who is said to have been with her in the farm house when the body was found, were under charges growing out of their alleged connection with Frasier's death. The woman was charged with murder, first degree, and Baker with being an accessory. Both were held to await the action of the Warren county grand jury.

In her confession, Mrs. Frasier is said to have admitted she quarrelled with her husband because he accused her of intimate relations with Baker. She also is said to have admitted purchase of the poison. The bottle is said to have been found under a stone in the pasture where she and Baker hid it.

Two years ago Mrs. Baker brought a divorce action against Baker, naming Mrs. Frazier as corespondent. The divorce was granted.

Barbers' Strike Still in Effect

Master Barbers and Non-Union Men Trying to Attend to Trade While Journeymen Await Arrival of Organizer.

The strike of the journeymen barbers continues in effect and the only barbers at work are non-union men in non-union shops and the master barbers who are attending to such trade as they can in their own shops.

A statement issued by the master barbers Wednesday is to the effect that on May 26 they received a letter from the journeymen barbers informing the master barbers that on and after June 6, 1927, they wanted an earlier closing of shops. The hours demanded were from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m. daily except on Saturdays, when the shops were to close at 9 p. m. They asked for an hour for dinner and 30 minutes for supper.

The master barbers on Wednesday, June 1, called a special meeting to discuss the hour proposition and at that time sent a reply to the journeymen barbers stating that they were willing, those who were at the meeting, to close an hour earlier provided the journeymen barbers would get the remaining master barbers to close at that time. They suggested at that time that the journeymen barbers appoint a committee for that purpose.

On Friday evening, June 3, the journeymen barbers held a special meeting and on Saturday morning last sent a letter to the secretary of the Master Barbers' Association, Joseph Leotta, stating that unless their demands were met at once they would not report for work Monday morning of this week. The walkout Monday resulted.

Keep Open for Patrons' Benefit.

Tuesday evening the master barbers held a meeting to discuss the strike situation and after each member had considered the matter it was decided that as many of the patrons of the shops could not get to the shops before 7 o'clock at night, the closing hour set by the journeymen barbers, the master barbers concluded to reject the workmen's demands for an early closing and decided to maintain the same hours as before, closing at 8 p. m. daily and 10 p. m. on Saturdays.

The journeymen have decided to stay out pending the arrival of an organizer sent from headquarters in New York.

In the meantime the public is shopping around for non-union shops where the barbers are still at work or are having their work done by the boss barbers who are working in their own shops. The Governor Clinton Tonsorial Parlor in the Governor Clinton Hotel, which is operated by Joseph Leotta in conjunction with his shop on Railroad avenue, was closed Monday and Tuesday by reason of the strike when it is claimed the strikers refused to allow one man to remain and keep the shop open. On Wednesday a master barber was put in charge and the traveling public was given service.

Several of the master barbers are willing to abide by the early closing demands of the striking workmen but others are not willing to concede to the demands. The strikers maintain that they will hold out until they win their demands. What results the organizer from New York will get on his arrival here remain to be seen.

PAINT COST HIT BY CHINA'S WAR

Price of Tung Oil, Used in Varnish, Is Sent Sky-rocketing.

Washington.—Many Americans may have wondered recently why the United States maintains a fleet of gunboats at Hankow, 600 miles up the revolution-popping Yangtze river.

Tung oil, a substance vital to the American varnish and oilcloth industries, is one answer. American gunboats have been convoying merchant ships loaded, in part, with tung oil.

"When the paint store clerk explains that varnish is up in price because of civil war in China," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society, "do not scoff.

Fine for Children.

"Tung oil, or Chinese wood oil, has skyrocketed from its normal price of 12 cents per pound to 30 cents per pound. The cost of China's civil war to the American manufacturer and to the consumer on this one item is startling. Manufacturers are paying the increase on imports which total more than one hundred million pounds of tung oil annually.

"Perhaps you have wondered what the woman in the magazine advertisement who pours boiling hot water from the teakettle onto the dining-room table thinks about. She ought to be giving thanks to tung oil trees that the table escapes damage. When Johnny and Mary play 'rainy day' in the parlor and the floor shows no ill effects, praise goes to weary oil pressers living in the mountains of Szechwan province. Oilcloth sheds water better than a duck and varnish brushed on the bedroom floor one evening can be walked on next morning, because of the magic oil in a green nut which grows in southwest China and Florida.

"Civil war in China five or ten years hence will not bring such a flurry in tung oil because Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana will then be producing. Plant explorers of the Department of Agriculture saw the problem facing the American plant and varnish industry, and 18 years ago introduced the first tung oil tree. If Florida today had 50,000 acres of producing tung oil trees she would be enjoying an extraordinary burst of prosperity, but there are only 3,000 acres of trees in all the South. Few farms have trees older than saplings, so civil war in China has played hob with tung oil prices.

"Boats, as any boat owner knows, demand constant attention: calking, painting and refitting, so it is natural that a water-wise people like the Chinese would discover an efficient preservative for boat hulls. Chinese junks float because tung oil seed pulp calks their seams and tung oil soaks their timbers. The strange thing is the Western world did not appreciate the magic of the Chinese wood oil before 1869. Now it takes a favored place beside such other Chinese contributions as silk and gunpowder. Tung oil shares its field of service as a dryer and waterproofing agent with the more widely used linseed oil.

Pin Money Crop.

"To find the source of China's wood oil a traveler must journey into the stark mountain valleys of Hunan and Szechwan provinces. If he expects to find orchards he will be disappointed for tung oil trees, like American hickories, grow where nature plants them. The Chinese farmer depends on vegetables and grain, not nuts, to feed his family. If good fortune blesses him he will own also three or four tung oil trees to supply a pin money crop.

"Buyers move through the valleys in the fall, purchasing small stores of tung oil tree nuts. Removal of the green flesh releases the seeds, five in each nut. After being roasted and cleaned, the seeds are ground by patient bullocks turning a stone roller, and the resultant pulp is mixed with straw. Cakes of tung seed pulp the size of swiss cheese disks are inserted in a hollowed log. A pile driver device squeezes 40 per cent of the oil out of the cakes.

"Tung oil itself helps to solve the difficulty of getting a liquid to market in a region where wheeled vehicles are useless. The Chinese make a serviceable container out of a bamboo basket lined with 16 thicknesses of paper coated with tung oil varnish. This container is light but it will bear the weight of 120 to 380 pounds of sloshing tung oil. Coolies swing the baskets on poles and carry them down to a river shipping point. Still in baskets, tung oil shoots the Yangtze gorges in junks. A rudder in front as well as in back does not always prevent a junk piling up on a rock and releasing an $8,000 cargo to the muddy river. Huge storage tanks for receiving tung oil have been built at Hankow, which is today a revolution storm center.

"In the past oil was brought to the United States in white oak barrels. The American demand is now so great that tung oil comes across the Pacific in tank ships at the rate of 12,000,000 gallons per year."

Modern Society Slow to Forgive Criminal

Can a criminal come back to society?

No. In all my experience I have never known a case of a thoroughly successful comeback, when a former criminal was allowed to take his place in society and be received into it. It is not so much the failure of Christianity as the fact that human nature and society have not reached the stage of enlightenment or willingness to accept the ex-criminal. Human nature and society, constituted as they are, are such as to prevent an absolute comeback, and this is more in evidence because of the fact that the modern teachers of Christianity have failed in their mission of forgiveness, and also because it is invariably found that those who profess deep faith and a Christ-like spirit are the first to shun and scorn the really conscientious unfortunates, or innocent victims of circumstances, who are genuinely desirous of completely blotting out their hideous past by sincere service in the cause of humanity at large.

But everything is not lost. Many prison workers and deep students of criminology feel that a spirit of understanding will sooner or later overcome these obstacles in the way of the ex-criminal.—Theodore Dreiser in the Smoker's Companion.

Courtship Record in '90s

Roy Tucker, a Fulton (Mo.) young man, bet he could take 50 girls buggy riding on 50 consecutive nights and collect a lock of hair from each one. This was back in the gay '90s. He won the bet, but found the quest so pleasant that he kept on until he had 100. Amid a collection of 1,200 other antiques he now has these trophies neatly mounted. At this curl-collecting period Tucker was a student at Westminster college. There was a time limit to the wager and for several hours Tucker seemed doomed to defeat. All the girls were "dated up." But Tucker had a happy thought. He took his sister out riding and got a lock of hair from her.—Capper's Weekly.

Black Not Always an Emblem of Mourning

The widow's mourning cap dates back to the days of ancient Egypt. Egyptian men shaved the beard and the head as a token of mourning. The women, instead of cutting off the hair, concealed it with a close cap. The Romans, who were as a race clean shaven, shaved the head in mourning and wore a wig.

The black band on the sleeve, as a sign of mourning, comes from the days of chivalry. The lady tied a scarf or napkin, as the handkerchief was called, about the arm of her knight. If he was killed in battle she wore the band in memory of him.

Black has so long been the color of grief in Anglo-Saxon countries that it seems a part of the upside-down civilization of the East that Japan and China wear white. But no longer ago than the time of Elizabeth the unfortunate Mary of Scotland wore white on the death of Darnley. Even now the hearse used for children is white, and in England the mourners at funerals of young unmarried persons wear hatbands and sashes of white.

A queer English custom is that of decorating the black hearse horses with long black tails.

Don't Shoot

Murder with a knife has somewhat gone out, because marks and fingerprints left on the knife are apt to betray the killer. But a short time ago, no one would have thought that a bullet could identify the man who sent it from his gun. Now, science is able to distinguish the scratches and grooves on fatal bullets, and determine from what revolver they were fired; for it seems that each weapon has distinctive marks in the bore of its barrel. When every other trace has been removed, the murderer is still in danger of detection, says the Scientific American, if the criminal has been careless enough to leave a bullet in his victim's body.

His Philosophy

"How dare you throw stones at my little dog?" shrieked the ancient spinster to a coal man.

"The brute bit me, that's why."

"How many times?" inquired the owner, fondling her pet.

"Once, and that's enough, ain't it?"

"Yes—but I saw you throw at him twice, you ruffian," said the woman.

"Ah," grinned the coal man, "once bitten, twice shy, you know."

There is no capsicum in this fine old ginger ale

"CANADA DRY" is a real ginger ale, made from the highest grade Jamaica ginger.

This is an important point to remember, because many of the imitations of "Canada Dry" are not really ginger ales at all, but are made with capsicum (red pepper). That is why they have that burning, biting, synthetic ginger taste.

Buy "Canada Dry," therefore, not only because of its wonderful flavor, but because it is a real ginger ale in every sense of the word. Buy it because it is one of the finest and most carefully made beverages in this country and you know you can depend on it—always!

The minute you taste it you will know it is altogether different from every other ginger ale.

Mlady's Appárel Takes Many Bows

Numbers of Ornamental Themes Are Offered for Spring and Summer.

Perhaps never before in the history of fashion have details taken on so significant a complexion as this season. With the straight line silhouette once more firmly established in the good graces of the mode, with the hemline no longer a matter for criticism or discussion, the natural corollary is that smartness for spring and summer is to be governed largely by discriminating emphasis on the proper details. So many of these ornamental themes have been offered for spring and summer, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, that it is easy to fall into the mistake of selecting some inconsequential embellishment which will be quite without fashion importance.

There is one outstanding detail this season upon which you can stake your all with a free conscience—and that is the bow. Indeed, it might not be stretching a point to deem the bow as the most significant theme that 1927 has thus far offered. The bow is yet too young in the devious ways of the mode to have joined any clique. It will be found at the waistline and it will be found as well at the neckline or just beneath the shoulders. Premet, for example, finishes off many round and square necklines by the bow, while other distinguished couturiers favor different determinants of the silhouette. Anywhere at all will meet the requirements of fashion, with the shoulders thus far the favored haven. Nor are there any strictures as to length or width on any of the bows. Some are broad and flowing, others quite narrow and demurely petite. For the moment the bow itself is the thing—its form is secondary.

The 1927 Neckline.

Ranging well up among the major incidentals of the new mode are the Vionnet neckline and the suddenly revived nose veil. It will be recalled that last year Madeleine Vionnet attracted sharp interest among the fashionables by the overnightly famous Viennet sleeve. At this writing there is definite prospect that her 1927 neckline will attract just as favorable notice. This particular line has been called square, but it is not square in the ordinary sense of the word—it might better be described as straight. It reaches from shoulder to shoulder, describing a straight line between them. Especially in the blouses that go with the new tailleurs has this line been effectively used.

As for the half-length veil, it has been crescending its way through the mode since an inconspicuous introduction along the Riviera. How long its tenure will be is not important. For this season it is favorably sanctioned by Paris, and inasmuch as it adds a really unique note to current syles our counsel is that you adopt it occasionally at least. Strictly speaking, it is not in the tempo of the current mode, but that should not bother you. It is attractive and it is feminizing, and the smart woman will lose no opportunity to stress the all too few softer aspects of fashion.

Another worth-while fetish of the current mode is the one-side effect, which emphasizes a noticeable detail at one side only. Thus Vionnet shows numerous frocks and coats in surplice fashion with a decided flare on either the right or left side. Drecoll includes a number of smart models which are draped at only a single side, as well as some others which feature yokes and panels, these latter also confined to one side. In fact, throughout the various summer collections there is a significant emphasis of this theme, one of whose outstanding merits is its effective breaking up of the boyish straight line. Not only are you quite safe in adopting it this summer, but you will mark yourself indelibly as one of the smartest if it becomes an integral theme in your new wardrobe.

On the subject of sleeves much has been said this spring. The curious conflict between the daytime and evening modes whereby the latter sailed into uncharted channels by adopting long, full sleeves for the robe du soir, while the former reverted to post-war flapperism by sponsoring daytime frocks with no sleeves at all, has attracted wide comment. We have not hesitated definitely to condemn the sleeveless street frock. Despite which we cheerfully commend the long-sleeved evening dress to your particular attention. Its virtues are these—it is undeniably effective, it is decidedly different and, in these days of generous revelations, it is surely unique. Exploit it these warmer evenings and your place will be unquestioned in the model ranks.

Must Recognize Youth.

College professors who once preached loudest against the youth movement are now engaged in adjusting themselves to it—fashion critics who decried contemporary fashions as being a flare-back to barbarism have suddenly stopped baying the moon to join the procession. And save only those gentle souls who wear old lace and breathe in an atmosphere of lavender, the mesdames of the mode have joined the expressionistic movement in clothes.

And there you have a really curious situation. Observe some smart society matron of today arrayed in perhaps Lanvin's zouave frock. Then turn to a prewar newspaper file, or family album, and look at a photograph of the same lady gayly decked in the majestic garb of the earlier years of this century. It cannot be that this ever so feminine lady of 1912 has completely metamorphosed into the straight, semi-masculine type of today. It must be that sometimes there comes a surging desire to revert to the days before realism had routed romance. The ingrained manners and breeding of a score and more years cannot be cast off in five or six. And yet, to every outward viewpoint, that has happened. The knee-revealing hemline and a conforming silhouette which looks as though it were individually draped have been adopted unanimously by the same ladies who not so long ago wore the most demure of frills and furbelows and gloried in them.

Follow the Crowds.

They have been adopted here because Fashion has very little to do with personal preferences. As the crowds go you will go, and while it is courageous and valiant enough to march in the opposite direction, you can't get far unless you're very callousd to ridicule. From the viewpoint of the mode, upstream is the diametrically wrong course.

If you would be chic this spring and summer, and for at least several seasons after that, it is your inescapable duty to conform to the modal tenets of the moment. No matter what secret longings you may have for the stately ankle-length skirt, it behooves you to terminate the hemline no lower than a few inches below the knees.

Often enough fashion writers have vociferously preached the doctrine of greater femininity in dress, more mature effects and what not, displaying at the same time some sketches of the mode from Paris which were as young and masculine as you could imagine. If you are one of those whose heart is still with the Victorian regime, there is your cue. French couturier dress as loud and long as you will, decry some of the very vulnerable themes of modernistic styles to all the corners of the earth. In that way you may stir up some excellent propaganda which will later bear fruit. Exploit at every opportunity the most gentle versions of this seldom feminine mode. But remember that modernism in dress is still the only key to chic, and in general wear without compromise or exception the expressionistic garb of the moment. You may preach, in a word, a doctrine you do not dare to practice. Unless, of course, yours is the unregenerate courage of the dowagers from Back Bay.

Lindbergh Fed Up on Chicken

U. S. S. Memphis, June 9 (AP).—Here is a tip for President Coolidge and others who are arranging feasts for Colonel Lindbergh.

Don't feed him chicken—he's plumb fed up with it.

Lindbergh ordinarily likes chicken, but it has been placed before him in one form or another at nearly every formal luncheon since he landed at Le Bourget Field, Paris, from New York.

At the field it was handed him in the form of soup. Then in Paris he was served with the finest that the countryside produced.

When he flew to Brussels, it was chicken again, capon, spring chicken and roasted chicken, and during the luncheons and banquets in London, the English brother prize fowls from Surrey and Kent to tickle his palate.

On the Memphis, chicken has been part of the daily menu also, so Lindbergh is longing for a good old fashioned steak, or anything else but chicken.

Famous Horsebreeder Retires.

Blissful Beginning

Owing to the absence through illness of the woman who taught the senior girls' Bible class, the young assistant minister was asked to undertake the duties for the day.

He consented, but before beginning he said, smilingly:

"Now, girls, I want to conduct your class just as your teacher does, so you might tell me what she does first."

A short pause, then the answer from a pert miss of sixteen: "Well, she always kisses us all round!"

Mahomet's Career Short

Mahomet became a prophet and an international figure after he was forty years old, and finished his epoch-making career in 23 years. At the age of forty he began to get the "visions" which gave him the precepts for the Koran and commanded him to preach them to the world. "There is only one God, and Mahomet is his prophet" is the keynote he gave to the religion he founded—a religion whose adherents today number more than 220,000,000.

COAL AS USUAL.

Bituminous coal operators and miners, deadlocked since the strike began two months ago, say they hope to get together and reach a settlement on June 15. If they run true to form, after that conference they will express a hope that they may agree along about July 15. And then, if they still continue true to form, as seems likely, they will be deadlocked along about September 1, when the public begins to think about starting the furnace and industry begins worrying about its empty bins.

Meanwhile nothing seems to be done about putting this wasteful, over-manned and over-mined industry on an efficiency basis, after all the inquiries and discussions along that line in past years. There seems to be an idea that nothing much can be done about coal except to let nature take its course.

HITCH-HIKING DELINQUENTS.

All over the country, it is reported, the problem of the runaway child is becoming more serious than ever before. The wanderlust that starts boys and girls away from home without funds, without experience, without adequate preparation, is not new. There have long been children with restless feet. The new phase of the problem, which greatly increases the danger, is the development of hitch-hiking.

With the aid of kindly motorists, youngsters are often picked up early in their flight and are carried much farther in less time and with less effort to themselves than in the days when they traveled chiefly by trudging. Most of the time it is only kindly generosity that causes a motorist to stop his car and tell the kid to jump in and have a lift. But it is a thoughtless generosity that is too often harmful in the end.

NATURAL NATURE.

"Don't barber the parks too much," urges the head of the American Game Protective Association. "Don't remove the underbrush; don't drain the swamps; the game needs cover." This is true, not merely from the standpoint of sportsmen who want game to shoot. It is just as true from the standpoint of people who are friendly to wild life and like to see it in its natural habitat. The same principle applies to any piece of woods, and likewise to the landscaping of any but the smallest back yards.

Why should it be considered necessary, or even beautiful, to treat every building lot exactly alike, levelling it, eliminating all natural varieties of topography, making a perfectly prim, sleek lawn and formal flower garden, with conventional shrubs exactly in place, and nothing to attract any but the most civilized birds and animals, and very few of them?

Letting nature have her way a little with the ground, plants and trees is the best way to attract and keep the birds and squirrels and other friendly forms of wild life. A little ravine is a paradise for them. A dead tree trunk may be endured because the woodpeckers and squirrels and nuthatches love it. Woods within reason, may be welcomed because they, in turn, welcome little friends who will give a charm to the place beyond the power of any super-civilized landscape gardener.

The really modern and artistic landscaper knows this, and leaves at least a little piece of unimproved yard, to make an interesting contrast as well as attract wild visitors.

BLONDE CRIMINALS.

Almost 100 per cent of the villains of fiction, male or female, have been "dark complected." They are also apt to have the "lean and hungry look" which Plutarch gave to Cassius many centuries before Shakespeare did. Wilkie Collins ventured to break the record in the latter particular by making his villain in "The Woman In White" a very fat man. But the fair and blue-eyed type has almost invariably been made representative of innocence, virtue and honesty. No wonder "gentlemen prefer blondes." No wonder the spectators of a stage melodrama spot the villain of the piece the moment a "dark complected" fellow with black mustache steps out on the boards, recognising at once that his swarthy exterior is the fitting as well as the traditional accompaniment of his criminality. Is all this merely because our literary pabulum has been furnished chiefly by Anglo-Saxon writers and their American followers?

This question is suggested by the surprising assertions in a book just published by Francis Carlin, a Scotland Yard detective. "While there is a common impression," he writes, "that criminals mostly have dark hair, eyes and complexion, actually in my own experience most criminals have blue eyes, fair complexions and brown hair." Mr. Carlin does not stop at mere assertion. He cites statistics from the Criminal Records Office in London showing that blondes comprise 76 per cent of persons convicted of crime. Revolutionary will be widely regarded as the only appropriate word for such revelations, but, though unwelcome among Anglo-Saxons, we may be sure the showing will gratify the darker folk of southern Europe.

PRIVILEGED GOVERNORS.

There seems to be no expectation that Congress will be influenced by the petition which the American Medical Association in recent convention "resolved" to present in the hope of securing for physicians the right to decide how much whiskey a sick man may need. Nor is it likely that numerous doctors will discontinue their known practice of disregarding the letter of the law in emergencies and administering the quantity they believe to be necessary to save life. We read that in Tennessee the physician in attendance on Governor Peay, whose life was recently despaired of, has "pulled his patient through with ample doses of whiskey," and when told that he was breaking the law coolly remarked that he "didn't care" about that, the saving of the Governor's life, which he claims as his work, being all that concerned him.

It seems that the law was also disregarded during the recent serious illness of the wife of the Governor of Indiana. In that anxious time Governor Jackson is said to have inquired as to the possibility of "lawful acquisition" of enough reliable whiskey and was told by the Attorney-General that there was no lawful way. The whiskey was obtained, however, and administered. It has since been proposed in the legislature that Indiana's stringent law be relaxed so that the Governor's family may not suffer. Naturally this has raised the question as to whether Governors should be more privileged than other persons in a country where every citizen is traditionally a "sovereign." As one protest puts it, "what is good for a Governor is none too good for a garbage man." However that may be, there are signs of a widening extension of the opinion that the doctors know more about medicine than Congress.

CURING PARALYSIS BY MALARIA

The great improvement in health observed in some individuals after a severe illness or infection has been noted for many years.

After an attack of typhoid fever, for instance, there is often a great increase in weight, and in the general health of the patient. It would seem that Nature rallies all her forces to combat the invader, and keeps up her good work even after the invader has been driven out.

In our mental hospitals are many cases of paralysis. The type is known as the General Paralysis of the Insane, or G. P. I.

They are practically helpless, very careless in their habits, and a constant worry to doctors, nurses and attendants.

It was noted that where some of these patients had an attack of malaria there was often an improvement in the general health, and in the paralytic condition also

Accordingly experiments have been carried out in many hospitals in England, America, Canada and elsewhere, and whilst these research men are very careful in stating the results of these experiments, there is no question but that there are positive cures, and a great improvement in the condition of many others.

One of the county mental hospitals in England gives some interesting figures.

There were 120 cases of general paralysis of the insane, infected by the malaria organisms by different methods.

Some were bitten by mosquitoes, the usual method by which malaria is transmitted, others by injection into the vein, and others by injection into the muscles.

The patients went through the regular malaria symptoms in a mild form, and then were cured in the regulation manner by quinine sulphate. About one in five were cured of the paralysis which certainly shows that it is worth the effort

And in addition, from the hospital point of view, the treatment is certainly worth while, as many that were not sufficiently improved to leave the hospital, became much easier to handle in hospital, because of the improvement in their habits and behavior about the hospital.

This is a wonderful thing as we stop to think about it, and yet it had been only under experiment the past few years.

Just what will happen in other conditions, from similar experiments, is hard to foretell.

Material Men Visit Cement Plant

The steamer Chauncey M. Depew of the Hudson River Day Line landed at Kingston Point Wednesday at 3 p. m., a party of 350 building material merchants of Greater New York, who were the guests of the North American Cement Company on a day's outing. The feature of the trip was the inspection of the Acme plant at Alsen where the company manufactures cement.

As soon as the members of the party were ashore they were photoed by William H. Longyear, after which the boarded thirteen busses to be conveyed to the plant at Alsen. There they were shown through the Acme mill and the processes of cement making were explained in detail. A banquet was also served to the guests at the mill.

The party returned to New York city in the evening on the steamer which moored at the Kingston Point landing while the builders enjoyed the visit to the Acme plant.

MORGAN MUCH MORE THAN "BIG BANKER"

Ranked by Gary as Great Business Statesman.

In the three score years of my professional and business life it has been my good fortune to meet many men who have figured prominently in the business and industrial world, here and abroad, and a considerable number I have known intimately, Elbert H. Gary writes, in the Saturday Evening Post. I do not know of one in all that brilliant procession who was the mental equal of J. P. Morgan.

In fact, I have never met another man who was similar to him. In my opinion his was the most constructive mind we have had in the whole business history of our country. He is ranked by all as a great financier, but he was more than that. If ever there was a business statesman it was J. P. Morgan. I never knew him to take hold of an undertaking that did not have as its chief hope of success the immediate benefit of many, and the unending public good.

Mr. Morgan was physically a strong, vigorous man, and in his youth very handsome. When his mind was in action his dark eyes shone like coals of fire and his magnetic influence over others was beyond accurate and full description. When he was dealing with human affairs, however, the expression in his eyes was that of a tender-hearted, sympathetic woman. Those who knew him best loved him most and trusted him completely. Very frequently his gestures would indicate great positiveness, but his mind was composed and his expressions clear, forcible and distinctive. When he walked his strides were quick and his footsteps indicated alacrity and firmness.

With all his characteristics he was ordinarily bashful, modest and unobtrusive. It was because of this diffidence that he sometimes created a wrong impression of his disposition when approached by newspaper reporters and some others. There was no bitterness or undue antagonism in his intentions. When he was complimented, publicly or privately, he was not inclined to respond, although to the keen observer and close acquaintance he gave signs of appreciation and gratitude.

When he was thanked for kindnesses which he had shown to business men he gave no recognition, except perhaps a smile that was almost imperceptible. It is believed that no keen-minded acquaintance with a desire to be fair and honest ever had occasion to find fault with Mr. Morgan's final decisions.

But His Name Was Smith

Elizabeth Jones, Philadelphia, was trying to catch a street car. Her handbag swung from her arm. Arthur Jones, rough customer, grabbed the bag and ran. Miss Jones screamed for help. Stanley Jones, policeman came dashing up. Arthur Jones kept on running with Elizabeth Jones and Stanley Jones in pursuit. He ran into the arms of another policeman, Sam Jones. So Sam Jones and Stanley Jones with Elizabeth Jones took Arthur Jones to court where the judge held him on $800 bail. However, the magistrate's name was Smith.

Norma Shearer

There is a road to charm and beauty and there are three paths which lead to it, asserts Norma Shearer, the charming motion picture star. The paths, Miss Shearer says, are perfect grooming, well-chosen and appropriate clothes, and poise acquired from grace of manner. Her latest production is "The Demi-Bride."

For Meditation

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

COWARDICE

IT IS an act of cowardice to run away from a difficult situation. Problems which daily become a part of one's experience must be intelligently met and solved. Unsolved problems when allowed to accumulate create environments and conditions which block progress. A man must either drive his work or be driven by it. Should the latter prevail, man becomes a slave. Should the former prevail, man becomes a master. Failure in life is more frequently attributable to the fact that work drives men rather than men drive work. The man who would successfully control the issues of any enterprise must first of all have learned the fine art of knowing how to control himself. An orator who sways his audience compelling them to think as he thinks and feel as he feels, is himself calm, serene and self-controlled. Should he himself lose the balance of power and exhibit it in his speech, the audience only laughs.

The alternatives confronting a man who meets his daily problems is either to fight them out or succumb to the inevitability of failure. Not to make the effort to fight them out is cowardice of the worst sort. To resign one's self to whatever conditions arise, without making a fight for one's ideals and ambitions, is fatalism. There is no weakness of human nature quite as intolerant and unbearable as the asininity of fatalism. No exercise contributes more to the development of mind and heart than a daily fight with a knotty problem. One must adjust himself to the daily task of mastering the problems which enter into his experience or perish in the effort. To attempt anything less is "weakness."

Postponement of action breeds danger. Putting off until tomorrow what could and should be done today explains many disasters. With every problem there seems to come a sort of "power" to meet it. A "power" created by the very conditions under which the problem arose. This important asset may be absent tomorrow. "Do it now," contains some fine philosophy.

One of the greatest privileges in life is to daily confront a difficult problem and subdue it into obeisance to the power of will and purpose.

The Wlp, June 9.—There will be a meeting in the chapel every Sunday at 7:30 p. m., beginning June 12. Mr Olsen invites everyone to attend.

A number of guests were entertained at the Olsen boarding house over Memorial Day.

Puzzled Margaret

"Funny our hats should have cost more than pianos," said little Margaret as they walked along. "They don't, dear," said her mother. "What made you think so?" "Well, that sign in the window says: 'Hats, $10 up,' and just now I saw a sign in another window, 'Pianos, $10 down.'"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Shiftless Folk

A small negro boy, aged six, in Goochland county, Virginia, accompanied his father to Richmond recently, his first visit to the city. "How did you like it in town?" some one asked him, on his return. "Hit's all right," replied the little darkey. "But jes' walkin' aroun'—Ah does' see how dey makes a livin'."

Origin of Flowers' Names

Many flowers are named from an ingenious story or symbol—the beautiful trinity flower of our spring woods with its pure white petals and three fold division the passion flower as emblem its St. Bernard's lily, Jerusalem cross, star of Bethlehem, Adams' needle, Aaron's rod and Solomon's seal.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE SUNSET PARTY

These were the days now of parties. The fairies thought they could give so many in the lovely summer evenings and days.

They had an especially nice party just the other night, or, perhaps I should say, at sunset.

The party was given just at sunset, as I have already said, but its chief feature was that it was given entirely for the butterflies.

The fairies, as you know, love beautiful things and beautiful creatures.

So they are the greatest admirers of the butterflies.

They sent their invitations in a very unusual way.

Hidden in the honeysuckles were little heart-shaped buds which said:

"The fairies invite the butterflies to come to a sunset party just at sunset tomorrow."

The butterflies were pleased to receive their invitations. Of course, they all got them very promptly, for the butterflies hurry to the honeysuckles just as many people hurry to the post office to get mail.

You see, they were not disappointed, for an invitation to a party of the fairies is a great honor.

The butterflies talked about the party all day long and bathed in the sun so their colors would look bright.

They naturally wanted to look their best, for, after all, every child, every fairy, wants to look as well as possible for a party.

The fairies also bathed in the crystal spring and basked in the sun.

Just at sunset the butterflies flew to the mossy ground that had been arranged for the party.

They flew in order. First came a group of yellow ones, which were supposed to look like the sun.

Next came the bright colored ones, which represented the different colors of the sunset.

Then came the ones which looked like the early evening, the pale blue ones, and lastly came the black ones to look like dark night.

The fairies clapped their hands when they saw the butterflies arriving, for they thought it was just the loveliest idea of the butterflies to come in order and to make such a beautiful butterfly picture of the different hours of the day.

It was a compliment to the fairies, who love the different hours of the day and had arranged a party because they wanted to show their appreciation of the beauty of the evening sunset.

Her Hymn

Miss Teachem, wishing to arouse the interest of her Sunday school class, asked them each to write down the name of their favorite hymn.

All the scholars bent their heads over pencil and paper for a few minutes, and then handed in their slips; that is to say, all except Mary.

"Come, Mary," the teacher said, "write down the name of your favorite hymn and bring the paper to me."

Mary wrote and, with downcast eyes and flaming cheeks, handed the teacher a slip of paper bearing the words, "Willie Smith."

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Friday, June 10.

Nine o'clock eastern daylight saving time or 8:00 eastern standard time seems to be the popular time for broadcasting the highlights of Friday night. At that time the Philco Hour, with solos by Erva Giles, soprano; Frank Munn, tenor, and Sam Herman, xylophonist, will be heard over WJZ and the Blue Network; the Georgia Minstrel Boys will croon their southern melodies through WGY; the WBAL ensemble will present a program of national dance music of various foreign countries; the Merideth players will offer "The Londonerry Air" for those who tune to WOR, and selections from the musical comedy, "The Prince of Pilsen" will be featured by WEAF and the Red Network. Later in the evening the Mariner's Quartet will render a program of briny songs of the sea, which will be radiated by WRVA. The Theresa Lisieux Ensemble will entertain the fans of WLWL. WBAL has arranged a concert by the Baltimore Municipal Band, and "Southern Melodies" will be featured by KOA's vocalists and instrumentalists.

Wave lengths in meters on left of station title, kilocycles on the right. Times are Eastern Daylight Saving and Eastern Standard. Black type indicates best features.

SCHOOL DAYS

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

ART OF RECUPERATION

THE idea prevails that when one is inclined to lag a bit in one's field of routine duty one needs a season of absolute idleness, as if loafing were the open sesame to perfect rest and the fairyland of youthful dreams.

Generally speaking, no thought can be more erroneous and misleading.

There is nothing quite so befogging and injurious to the active mind as a sudden cessation of its energy or curtailment of its habitual effort.

Rest is not to be found in indolence but in a change of activity, where both body and mind perform a new form of work.

When the thinker becomes tired and feels that he cannot proceed another step in the direction he has been so long pursuing, he is in need of change in his mental environment, where he will encounter new thoughts in new settings.

The brain requires a new diet, a savory dish of some sort which will be easily digested and leave a pleasant taste.

Frequently a radical change in reading will work this transformation in a day or two, and rekindle the slumbering fire from live embers hidden in the ashes.

If you are worn out in the tiresome chase of letters, turn awhile to figures, where you are compelled by the mere novelty of the change to conjure up some long-forgotten rule in algebra.

Should that fail to satisfy, take a peep into the body of your old Latin reader, or dip into astronomy, where you are forced to think in new dimensions and move out into the immeasurable vastness of which our own little globe is but a speck no larger than a grain of mustard seed.

In a little while you will find that this novel operation of the mind gives rest to your thinking faculties, broadens your vision, refreshes and strengthens your whole being.

Life assumes a new meaning. The dull skies become golden and gladsome. Frowning faces wear winsome smiles, and in the very joy of your new existence you go back to your old, dry humdrum work, which in some way realizes that you are the master to whom it must yield in the future with utmost complacency.

Mother's Cook Book

In a sense, love is everything. It is the key to life, and its influences are those that move the world. Live only in the thought of love for all and you will draw love to you from all. Live in the thought of malice and hatred and malice and hatred will come back to you.—Trine.

MILK DISHES

MILK, the best of all foods for children, is always a good foundation for any number of desserts, wholesome alike for old and young, and for those of weakened digestion.

A smooth, good custard is made by using a pint of milk with two eggs, adding a pinch of salt and such flavoring as suits the taste. If one wishes a custard thick enough to mold, add three to four eggs to a pint of milk. The more egg the more nutriment, so it is a dish to be recommended for those who would be built up.

Baked Custard.

Beat four eggs slightly, add a half cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg or cinnamon, and one quart of milk. Set into the oven in a pan of water and bake until firm enough to cut with a knife, and the knife comes out clean. Overcooking will curdle or coarsen the custard, making it less digestible and far less attractive in appearance. A perfect custard should be as smooth and even grained as cream. Remember to remove the custards from the water pan when taken from the oven, or they will continue to cook in the hot water. Set into cold water to chill and serve well chilled.

Ginger Custard.

Line buttered custard cups with strips of Canton ginger, then pour in carefully a thick custard, using four eggs, a pint of milk, one-third of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt and two teaspoonfuls of the ginger sirup. Lacking the sirup, flavor to taste with orange or lemon. Beat the eggs very slightly, add sugar, salt, milk and flavoring, then strain into molds. Set into hot water and bake until firm. Serve with a spoonful of the sirup over the top of each.

Caramel Custard.

This is a custard which is particularly well liked. It may be made by adding the caramel (melted sugar until brown) to the custard prepared as above or the sugar may be browned and poured into the molds; have them hot and turn until the bottom and sides are well coated with the caramel, then turn in the custard and bake as usual. As it is well to remember that caramelizing sugar destroys some of its sweetness, more sugar should be used than is usual.

Do You Know ...??... That: ...??...

THE expression "A little bird told me" is based on the popular idea that the bird from its point of vantage in the upper air found out all sorts of strange and mystical things and then revealed them to those who understood. This is a very old idea and we even read of it in the Bible, Ecc. 10:20: "Curse not the King, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter."—Anna S. Turnquist.

Van Buren Talks Liberty to Rotary

Points Out That Nobody Enjoys Entire Liberty, But Actions Are Controlled by Someone Else—Nevertheless, He is an Optimist.

Kingston Rotary Club at its luncheon Wednesday at the Governor Clinton had as guests Rotarian Alfred Saxe of Towanda, Penn., who is a native of Walden, and "Mike" Bebarfeld of Albany, a former member of Rotary in Kingston. Through the courtesy of Manager Texier, of Reade's Kingston Theatre, Mr. Dodson, a headliner now appearing at the theatre, enteriained during the luncheon with stories and impersonations that delighted everyone.

V. A. Gorman, W. A. Carl and W. H. Niles, were appointed a committee to arrange for the ladies' night at the Catskill Mountain House.

The speaker of the day, Augustus H. Van Buren, whose subject was "Liberty", was introduced by Mertin Goldrick, in charge of programs this month, and spoke as follows:

I am to talk to you on liberty, an extensive subject to be discussed in a short time. In order that I may not be misunderstood or misquoted I have put in writing what I have to say. I wish you to remember that when I use the word politics I employ it in its widest sense as meaning that system of government which brings the greatest liberty to the individual, and to the mass of the people. We hear a great deal about the liberty of the individual. No man has entire liberty unless he dwells upon an island thousands of miles from any human beings, and the moment another man sets his foot upon that island one-half of his liberty is gone, and the moment a woman appears on that island all of his liberty has gone.

If you walk down Wall street with bare legs a cop will run you into the jail, but if a bobbed-head fairy does the same thing the cop will run away.

My house is mine, but if I burn it I land in state prison. If you do not obey a traffic signal I fine you ten dollars or ten days. There are a lot of men and some women who get hot under the collar in declaring that they have a right to take a drink of whiskey when they feel like it. They haven't if it injures others and even if it only injures themselves. The style of clothes which men wear is determined by a handful of tailors. We have buttons just above the tails of our long coats and buttons on each sleeve. They are of no use whatever, but the gentlemen of England used them to fasten their coat tails to when they sat down, and those on the sleeves to fasten their long lace cuffs to when they dined, and we can't get rid of them. The garb of most of the women is determined by the grisettes of Paris and they have to conform to it though it makes a lot of them look like scare-crows.

You got your party politics from your father and if you changed them you did so because of the newspapers and magazines. You declare that any man can become a candidate for any political office.

Perhaps he can if he be a Rockefeller, but if not, he can't be without the consent of the party boss, whether he be Phil Eltinge or Harry Schirick. If you think you can, go try it on. You proudly declare that this is a free country and you can vote for office any legally qualified person you please. You can, but if you vote for any other than a party candidate you vote in the air. Nine persons out of ten got their religious faith from their mother—a good enough faith for any person; but she got her faith from those before her, and they from a group of men who hundreds of years ago wrote a creed which neither they or anyone else knows what they mean. You think you can have your children educated in the manner and in the subjects which you think best. You can't. They are educated as determined by the state.

You cannot be admitted to any of the so-called learned professions except by a certificate granted by some one person or body of persons who in many cases are bigger fools than you are; and after you are admitted you must practice your profession in the way and manner prescribed by some law enacted by legislators, the majority of whom had no idea as to what the law meant and didn't care.

In this connection the best, the most advanced, and humane law I ever heard of was enacted in China ages ago. It provided that if a doctor cured his patient he got no pay; and if his patient died he got his head cut off.

Look which way you please, and you will see that we all are on a treadwheel which we have to keep going according to the orders of some one, and if we try to stop or get off we break our necks.

What as to the liberty of man collectively, the nation and the state, which we call Triumph Democracy. Socrates believed he found the ideal state in Knowledge, Plato in his Republic, St. Augustine in his City of God, Bacon in his New Atlantis, More in his Utopia, Rousseau in his Le Contrat Social, Nietzsche in his superman. They are only dreams. The tendency of the age is to destroy individualism and substitute one or a few rulers, a company or a gigantic corporation. Formerly our ministers to foreign countries acted on their own judgment, now with the advent of the cable, wireless and the radio they act as directed by the cabinet of the President, and he according to what he believes to be public opinion, as voiced by the newspapers, which is but the voice of party bosses and big advertisers. Not so many years ago nearly every business concern was owned by an indivdual or a partnership of a few, now nine out of ten by a company or a great corporation. Some of the latter embrace the world; witness, the ten and five cent, and department stores, Armour and Swift, the consolidation of the telephone and telegraph, gas and electric, iron and steel corporations and Standard Oil. The stockholders have no voice in the management of the corporation, the directors follow the president, and from the day laborer up to the highest paid superintendent all they do or not do, and how or how not they must do is, in the last analysis, dictated by the president of the corporation.

The boasted liberty of the individual man is lost in the shuffle of the cards.

Every war which has occurred from the time Xerxes built his bridge of boats across the Hellespont to the World War has been caused by either the endeavor of one set or men to believe in their creed and worship God as they did, or to pocket the almighty dollar. Witness the Crusades; the war of Catholicism against Protestantism, of Protestantism against Catholicism; one Protestantism sect against others; and by all Christian sects against those who wished to follow the example and have a few legal wives at the same time, but no particular objection was made to having a few illegal wives at the same time provided the wives were not acquainted with one another.

The Puritan fled to New England, the Catholic to Maryland; the Quaker to Pennsylvania to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and the moment they reached there they, with the exception of the Quakers, wouldn't let the other fellow worship according to the dictates of his conscience. All this in the name of Liberty. I have not time to allude to all the wars that have been waged to acquire wealth in one form or another. I select those which most of us believe were caused by higher and nobler motives.

Our fathers fought the battles of the Revolution to escape the payment of a tax on tea and a few other articles, to manufacture their own goods, and buy and sell where they pleased.

The War of 1812 to make the seas free to our ships. The War with Mexico to gobble up a vast slice of her territory. You tell me that our Civil War was fought to free the black man. Was it? The people of the south, almost to a man, had discovered that slave labor was dear labor, and wished to get rid of it; then Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin and the price of slaves went up by leaps and bounds; the north far surpassed the south in manufacturing, and in the opinion of the south to free the slave meant financial ruin, the loss of the almighty dollar; hence Fort Sumpter, Vicksburg, Gettysburg and Appomattox, Liberty.

Alexander the Great nearly annexed Asia to Greece. Caesar after conquering Gaul turned to the East. Napoleon fought the battle of the pyramids as a step to founding an empire in the East.

England stole most of India and parts of Africa. The Kaiser dreamed of building a greater Germany in the East, but in order to do, it he had to destroy the commercial supremacy of England and sink her navy in the seas; hence the World War, not for liberty, but for dominion, land, the almighty dollar.

We were forced into the World War, not, as declared by Wilson (who in my opinion will be written in history as one of our greatest Presidents), to save civilization and humanity, but to save New York and our coast cities from being leveled to the ground. And the result is what? England owns three-quarters of Africa, the richest country in natural resources in the world. France and Italy each own a slice of it. What will come out of Russia no man knows, but Uncle Sam got most of the gold in the world. Liberty.

What is the matter in Mexico and China? Lombard street and Wall street, and Standard Oil. China is as large as the United States with a population of 500 million; add to these the millions of India and Russia, and then there will be a deluge that will outdeluge the one of Noah, and it will be caused by the chase of the almighty dollar, not for liberty. The nation or the two or three nations which own the coal, oil and iron of the world and the people of the world will be the slaves of the rulers of such nations. Confucius was asked what is the best kind of civilization and answered, that kind of civilization which brings to the people the greatest happiness and contentment. The white race have never enjoyed such a civilization. Will we ever enjoy it? I think we will.

A man asked the Nazarene: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

He did not tell him to go to church, to pray, to sing a psalm, to read the Bible, to believe in any creed, but he told him, in the words of one of England's greatest men, "Go, get in bed with humanity." Get out of the cloister, leave the hearth, mingle with men, help them, minister to their wants, be one of them, live for "the other fellow."

Every man who has done his bit to raise the race to a nobler level and a higher plane got in bed with humanity. Our country has had many of them, from whom I select Abraham Lincoln who towers above and beyond them all. Born in a log cabin in the wilderness, a hare foot boy, uneducated in book learning, a rail splitter, a boatman, an unsuccessful merchant, a poverty stricken lawyer, and yet the world stands uncovered before him, not because he freed the slave, but because of his great heart, his tenderness, his mercy, his compassion, because he got in bed with humanity; and if Washington be the Father of his Country, Lincoln is its best beloved son. I am a Darwinian and an Evolutionist; a Liberalist, not a Fundamentalist; an Optimist, not a pessimist. I believe that Utopia will come and it will come through the efforts of those who got in bed with humanity, who lived for the "other fellow" and who followed the "Sermon on the Mount;" the only way to have true Liberty.

ORGANIST OF ROSENDALE CHURCH HONORED

Rosendale, June 9.—The fortieth anniversary of Mrs. C. V. Hasbrouck as organist at All Saints' Church, Rosendale, was commemorated most beautifully Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Hasbrouck was completely surprised by the Ladies' Guild and the parishioners with a fine supper.

Henry Mollenhauer acted as toastmaster which was well managed. The Rev. Mr. Cameron was introduced as the first speaker. He gave a lengthy and interesting talk on the welfare work of Mrs. Hasbrouck and on her faithfulness for so long a period of years. He also commended her on her tact in keeping the Ladies' Guild of which she was secretary, and the congregation together. He closed his address presenting a prayer book with her name and a fitting verse inscribed in gold, from the members of the church.

Next Mrs. Juengst was introduced as a representative of the Guild. She commented on the good spirit which prevailed in the Ladies' Society and of her loyalty and congenial ways. Mrs. Juengst presented a beautiful palm as a tribute of that order.

For the Vestry of the church, Henry Mollenhauer spoke splendidly of all her beautiful qualities, and as their tribute, presented a handsome basket of roses and carnations.

Next Mrs. Christiana presented a gold cross from her family, who hold her in high esteem.

After all these tributes Mrs. Hasbrouck accepted them with thanks and graciousness.

The Rev. Mr. Cameron closed with prayer.

Mr. Fein and Miss Ruth Merrihew entertained with the music.

The tables that were so tastefully decorated were cleared and the rest of the evening was spent dancing. Before the close of the evening Mrs. Hasbrouck shook hands with every one, thanking them for the honor they had bestowed on her.

You'd never dream clothes could get so white without boiling or hard rubbing. So safe, too!

TRULY, there's nothing like Rinso! Without a bit of hard rubbing, even without boiling, it gets clothes whiter and brighter than ever.

Rinso doesn't make frothy soap bubbles. It stirs into rich, creamy suds and makes the water soapy all through. Even hard water!

Just soak the wash in the thick Rinso suds—and forget about your washboard! You don't need it. Even the most soiled things require only a gentle rub between the fingers. Of course they last longer, this gentle way.

Easy on hands—and so economical!

Great for washers. The makers of 30 leading machines endorse it.

ELEANOR GUNN ON FASHIONS

Older Women Are Staunch Supporters of the Soft Silhouette and Are Partial to Chiffons and Georgettes for Teas and Luncheons.

New York—Every woman loves a soft fluttery sort of frock for warm weather festivities. The success of scalloped and irregular chiffons has been amazing. Now come laces and more chiffons in all sorts of "animated" designs. This term has been used to distinguish such frocks as are at their best in action, as against dresses characterized by "statue" draperies.

It seemed to some who attended the Paris midsummer opening that there was a tendency toward what someone described as "neater evening dresses." "Plainer," or even "more severe," might be a better way of expressing it. Chanel started the minds of makers of smart clothes along tailored channels when she added saddle buckles and tailored-looking belts and buttons to chiffon and lace dresses intended for the more frivolous moments of life. Now one finds lace being used in one and two-piece models that are almost severe in effect, and that, like so many other models, are belted, even buckled.

Women of importance, as some tactful soul has called the dowagers, or perhaps the matrons, are partial to soft lines. Severely tailored things belong to youth, mature figures being best concealed under graceful draperies. Hence the continuance in favor of uneven hems achieved by petal or pointed panels, of pleats, and of draperies, especially those which occur at either the side or front.

A dress such as is shown is an ideal bride's-mother dress and is just the sort of costume the woman of importance finds indispensable for the bridge, tea, and luncheon parties that dot the summer calendar.

SIMPLE SEA FOODS

There are more edible fish in the sea than edible animals on land. There are very few fish when caught that are not good to eat.

Brook Trout in Cream.—Brook trout are delicious cooked any way, but to vary this dainty morsel salt the fish lightly and lay in a baking dish or enamel baking pan with just enough water to keep the fish from burning. Bake slowly, basting with butter and water, about fifteen minutes. When the fish is nearly done add a cupful of cream and two tablespoonfuls of water to a double boiler, stir into this two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and a teaspoonful of finely minced parsley. Pour this over the fish in the pan and cook in the oven three minutes. Garnish with parsley and serve.

It has been well established in recent years that clams, both hard and soft shell, are most nourishing and easily assimilated, especialy when the tough and hard portions are removed. As a result, clam juice or extract, is now almost universally employed as a food for invalids.

Clam Broth.—Scrub the fresh clams with a brush until the shells are clean, using several waters. Place in a kettle, cover with cold water and simmer slowly for an hour. This method brings out all the flavor, the real ocean taste, and a highly concentrated broth which will allow diluting. Pour off the broth, strain it through a cloth, season, reheat and serve.

Clam Bouillon.—Heat the broth, add salt, pepper and a lump of butter. Serve very hot in bouillon cups. Add a spoonful of whipped cream to each cup if desired.

Cream of Cheese Soup.—Slice a large onion, add a pint of boiling water and boil until tender. Remove the onion and add a pint of milk with a pinch of soda. Pour this liquid over one tablespoonful of butter and flour cooked together. When the mixture thickens add one-half cupful of grated cheese and a beaten egg. Season with salt and pepper.

Couldn't Help

Coming into the living room one day, Mrs. Noble Smith found her small niece standing by a table and studying with a rather troubled countenance the page of a health magazine, out of which she had unfolded a good-sized picture of a skeleton. So intent was she that she did not notice her aunt until she said: "What's the matter, dear?"—for the child looked so worried.

"Aunt Florence," she said, drawing a long sigh as though she gave up trying to understand it, "here's a man God didn't finish."—Los Angeles Times.

Robe de Style Is Fashion Favorite

Period Frock Never Is Out of Picture; Popular at Palm Beach

Even in a season when tendency of the mode has been marked by a feminizing influence, preeminence of the period frock comes as something of a surprise climax. The surprise, observes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star, registers with more force, too, in the midst of the devotion that is still extended to sophisticated types of the sleek and slinky variety, which base their identity upon the modern spirit of architectural lines, without encumbrance of any sort to disturb the contour, so frankly linked with the sports idea.

The period frock or robe de style has been on the horizon for two years. To speak more accurately, it never is out of the picture, but up to the last year it was associated with the choice of the individualist in style. Even now, when it has come out of this classification in a general way, there are many fashion authorities who contend that the skirt formed on bouffant lines departs from the current feeling in style.

It is interesting that these contenders are entirely in sympathy with the trend toward femininity in today's fashions, but support their convictions with frocks that express such items of elaboration in terms of what is graphically described by one stylist as the "stripped" silhouette.

Another type evolved this season, which bridges the distance between the distending lines of the pure period frock and slim silhouette, is based on a chiffon frock by Louise Boulanger, wherein all the characteristics of the period frock are retained—that is, the closely fitted bodice in contrast to the full skirt of ankle length, the important feature being the straight-hanging fullness of the skirt.

Referring again to the bouffant period frock's emergence from the individualist's choice exclusively, one recalls the repeated emphasis placed upon it in the reports from Palm Beach during the season just closed. Not one observer alone, but several, commented upon the increased numbers of those wearing them—not only the youthful type so generally associated with it, but women of the older set. One observer especially interested and surprised at this spectacle of sophistication in period frocks, sought to find the masculine reaction to this change, with the result that the majority of the men interviewed expressed complete satisfaction with the new picture—saying that they were tired of the slinky, unclothed appearance and were altogether pleased to contemplate the picturesque revival. Observations at supper clubs through the season in New York further have substantiated the note, which is not confined to the very youthful faction of the dancing assemblage.

Rose Colored Felt Is Chic for Spring Hats

This rose-colored felt hat with ribbon drawn through the crown, and the felt stitched in design, is in vogue for spring.

Plaid Is Important in Snappy Spring Styles

The importance of plaid in spring styles is still to be reckoned with. Not only taffetas for afternoon wear, but wools for travel, sport and morning use are shown in plaid design. Max, of Paris, who designs sports and travel clothes, as well as furs, shows a new spring three-piece suit of plaid with a simple hip-length cape. The color is light blue and navy. A jumper blouse, which looks like a vest when the cape is on, is made of light blue with an upstanding military collar.

Hats Too Small; Have to Construct Special Shapes

Formerly women used to wear shoes too small for them. Now they are prone to wear hats too small for them and to suffer agonies in consequences. Milliners seem constantly urging customers to choose the small hats which have to go on with a shoe horn. The unbobbed women in many cases have revolted and the milliners have had to construct special shapes and sizes for the long-haired heads.

One Ordinary Day in Life of Statistician

Arose, feeling on the peak of the chart. Consumed average breakfast. Assumed average intellectual attitude toward life. (I am an average statistician with a mean disposition.) Organized new end-to-end toothpick circuit, New York to Detroit. Cable from India: Calcutta agent reports terminus reached for Splutter fountain pen line. Splutter pens now circle five-eighths of globe. Estimated potential heat in celluloid collars, with and without necks. Issued report re fact that five out of every nineteen fat men sink anyway; also that more than 24.37 "lost" golf balls are in plain sight all the time.

Statistics during lunch hour on maximum girth of the common garden mole (fam. Talpidoe). Wrote to Reach and Extend bureau about pyramid made of rear collar buttons lost in Hawaii in one year. Mailed circulars on Reversible Statistical Charts for This and That, and Surreptitious Studies in Statistics for Stutterers.

After dinner attended lecture on "Facts and How to Avoid Them." Reflected on the futility of the end-to-end spaghetti problem in Italy. To bed, and fell asleep dividing the sheep jumping over the customary stone wall by some of the digits.—Los Angeles Times.

Seeks Better Crabapples

Wanted: Native American crabapple trees that bear large apples. Prof. N. E. Hansen of South Dakota State college is on the lookout for American crabapple trees that cannot only make the prairie groves and forest edges glorious with pink bloom in the spring, but later on yield fruits fit to eat, which few of them do now. Or, if they will not bear good apples by their unaided selves, Professor Hansen proposes to cross them with desirable varieties of the European and Asiatic stocks already in cultivation, and thus obtain hybrids good for planting in the cold and semi-arid plains and foothills of the Northwest. He makes an appeal to his fellow-scientists and to all other interested persons to get in touch with him if they know of any wild trees of the native species whose fruits might be worth while in his program.

Ghouls Got Treasure

Fifteen years ago Calhoun Miller was buried near Springfield, Mo., in a copper coffin he had made himself, according to Capper's Weekly. Miller had considerable money and was known to have bought up thousands of $10 gold pieces, at $10.25 for every one brought to him. But when he died not a coin could be found. Recently it was noticed his grave had been disturbed. The coffin had been dug up. Under the head of the corpse a secret drawer was discovered, empty. It is believed the aged recluse had secreted his gold in this drawer, where grave robbers found it. Being sealed in the copper coffin, the body was so well preserved as on the day Miller was buried.

New clothes make a man feel uncomfortable.

Every time you say "business is rotten," you help it to be worse.

This little exchange of repartee was heard at one of the Jesse James resorts the other day, when the cigarette girl was collecting from a reluctant customer:

"Vat, feefty cents for vun package of Luckys? Vat do you think I am?"

"I don't know," yawned the girl, "but whatever the answer is, you're the only one of it."

Some remedies are worse than the disease, but the cure for poverty is not one of them.

"I can't find my can opener," said a Kingston wife the other day. "Probably away taking the rest cure," growled the other fraction of the family.

You'll find a few flappers like some chairs, all legs with very little seat and back.

The sky is brightest when bluest, but it's different with a man.

"I'm thinking of going into business for myself, teaching modern dancing."

"Don't do it. It's a shaky business."

McNutt. Just burned a hundred dollar bill.

McNitt: Gosh! You must be a millionaire.

"Well, it's easier to burn 'em than to pay 'em."

Anybody know how much damner a tinker's dam is than the other kind?

A philosopher expresses the hope that in his next incarnation, he shall be half Irish and half Hebrew. "For," he says, "the Irishman is happy as long as he has a dollar, and the Hebrew always has it."

"How is it I find you kissing my wife?" sternly exclaimed the husband, as he entered his home quietly.

"You find me doing it," replied the visitor, "simply because we didn't expect you home so early."

No man ever lives to be as old as he feels at 21.

"A man's wife is his better half, isn't she, father?'

"We are told so, my son."

"Then if a man marries twice there isn't anything left of him, is there?'

Fashion Note: A very dainty little frock can be made by simply cutting down a one piece bathing suit a trifle.

Brainy Bowers—I have a great dog. Why, you can take him a mile away and let him loose and he will find me.

Lankey Joe—Well, why don't you take a bath?

Most folks work too much. Work should be done only as a means of getting a little food and playthings.

If you are not kind, you are the wrong kind.

Chicago is a great packing center. Most everybody packs a gun.

Cadet Prayer Called Ideal in Supplication

The following prayer used by cadets at West Point military academy, the Pathfinder Magazine thinks, might well be practiced by American manhood as a whole:

"O God, our Father, Thou Searcher of men's hearts, help us to draw near to Thee in sincerity and truth. May our religion be filled with gladness and may our worship of Thee be natural. Strengthen and increase our admiration for honest dealing and clean thinking, and suffer not our hatred of hypocrisy and pretense ever to diminish. Encourage us in our endeavor to live above the common level of life. Make us choose the harder right instead of the easier wrong, and never to be content with a half truth when the whole can be won. Endow us with courage that is born of loyalty to all that is noble and worthy, that scorns to compromise with vice and injustice, and knows no fear when truth and right are in jeopardy. Guard us against slippancy and irreverence in the sacred things of life. Grant us new ties of friendship and new opportunities of service. Kindle our hearts with sympathy for those who sorrow and suffer. May we find genuine pleasure in clean and wholesome mirth and feel inherent disgust for all coarse-minded humor. Help us, in our work and our play, to keep ourselves physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight, that we may the better maintain the honor of the corps untarnished and unsullied, and acquit ourselves like men in our effort to realize the ideals of West Point, in doing our duty to Thee and to our country. All of which we ask in the name of the Great Friend and Master of men. Amen."

"GHOSTS" CAUSE INDIANA MAN TO SEEK NEW HOME

Hears Mysterious Rappings on Door and Spooky Footsteps in Room.

Louisville, Ky.—"I'm not afraid, but I think I will move," was the comment the other day of Claude Dowell as he sought another place to live than his boarding house at New Albany, Ind., just across the Ohio river from here.

Mysterious rappings on his door and the nightly tread of spooky footsteps in the room he occupied and where Earl Winsky committed suicide two months ago caused Dowell's decision.

Dowell said his slumber was disturbed soon after he rented the room and that strange manifestations occurred. He declared he heard rappings on the door of his room, but on investigation could not find anyone in the hall or near by.

Frequently, he asserted, he had been awakened by the floor of the room creaking under what seemed to be the footsteps of a heavy person. There was no "regular" time of hearing the strange noises, and the turning on of lights did not stop the sounds.

Noises in Lighted Room.

In fact, Dowell declares, the strange noises continued even when the room was ablaze with lights. Closest investigation failed to disclose reason for the sounds, and while Dowell does not particularly believe in ghosts he decided finally that he would sleep better elsewhere. So he packed his belongings.

Winsky was living with his grandmother, Mrs. Mary Smith, at the New Albany house when he fired a bullet into his own head. Mrs. Smith, shocked by the tragedy which ended the life of her grandson, moved from the residence, which was rented by Wade Weatherholt, who moved in with his family. The Weatherholts had plenty of room, so they accepted Dowell as a boarder, assigning him as quarters the room in which Winsky committed suicide.

Man Returns Home and Kills Wife, Child, Self

Pensacola, Fla.—Matthew Henderson, 30, a mail carrier, returned home abruptly from his work one morning recently, shot and killed his bride of five months and a four-year-old adopted daughter. The little girl ran out to meet him and was killed instantly when he fired one shot into her body, officers said.

Mrs. Henderson started to the door to greet her husband, but seeing him shoot the child, turned and fled. Henderson pursued her into the yard, where he fired two bullets into her body.

Returning to the house the mail carrier lay across a bed to end his own life with a bullet through the brain.

Youth Blames High Life for Shortage in Accounts

New York.—Keeping company with chorus girls and partaking too freely of New York's night life was the reason Louis M. Kowalski, twenty, is said to have given the police for taking money from the Queens-Bellaire bank, Hollis, where he was a clerk. He is accused of having taken $1,000 since the first of the year. Edward Kearn, cashier of the bank, complained to the police and Detectives Wing and Sabatino of the Jamaica squad immediately began to question Kowalski, who finally confessed.

40-Foot Fall of Boy, Five, Is Broken by Police Dog

Tuckahoe, N. Y.—Charles Scarfam, five years old, while playing on the porch of his home, fell 40 feet to the pavement and was only slightly injured when a large German police dog that happened to be passing on the sidewalk broke his fall. The youngster climbed the railing to walk to a playmate. Leaning too far over, he lost his balance and landed on the dog running the sidewalk. The dog ran off at a mad pace, frightened, but apparently uninjured.

Deer Move Eyeballs

There is a belief common among hunters and guides in the North woods that the eyeballs of a deer are set fast in the socket and are immovable. The deer has the same control over its eyes as other animals of this genus have.

Cowboys Shoot Way From Wrecked Car

Miles City, Mont.—A novel use for pistols was discovered by two cowboys of this section when they used their "guts" as an aid to extract themselves from under an overturned car.

Bert A. Mumpower and W. L. Vawter were pinned beneath their auto when the machine skidded off the road.

With no one in sight and little prospect of extracting themselves, Vawter poured a hail of bullets into the door of the car. Under the shower of the shots the door opened and enabled the men to crawl from their perilous positions.

The men escaped with minor injuries.

DOG IS VICTOR IN FIGHT WITH COBRA

Kills Snake and Escapes the Poison Fangs.

Calcutta.—How a terrier killed a cobra and escaped the poison fangs of one of India's most deadly snakes is related by a correspondent in a Calcutta paper.

"While at dinner at Barrackpore," he writes, "a party of nine was disturbed by a terrier barking furiously. Failing to silence him, one of our number went out with a torchlight and shouted that the dog was barking at a huge snake.

"The torch enabled the dog to see the snake; he seized it, dragged it off the veranda rails, and, in a series of rushes, pulled the twisting, writhing horror probably some 20 or 30 yards. We were then able to see by the hood that the snake was a cobra.

"Most of us rushed back to the house for sticks, while the man with the torch and another endeavored to get the dog away from the snake, but keeping at a safe distance.

"By the time we had returned with the sticks, however, the dog had done his work and appeared none the worse. Every moment we expected to see him show signs of distress, but he did not do so, regarding his victim with apparent disdain. The cobra was still alive, but its back was broken. It then only remained for us to beat its brains out with our sticks.

"I may add that one of the party has been living in the country for over 30 years, spending most of his time in the district, and he expressed astonishment that the dog had escaped a fatal bite."

Boy's Fake Fire Alarm Causes Fireman's Death

New York.—A prankish boy turned in a false alarm that caused the death of a fireman when the hose truck on which he was riding struck an elevated pillar at One Hundred Fifty-sixth street and Westchester avenue, the Bronx.

Henry Hoslter, forty-five, of 606 East One Hundred Thirty-fifth street, the Bronx, the father of four children, was the man killed. Two others were injured when the driver, Joseph Conroy, swerved the truck to avoid a collision with another truck and struck the pillar.

The police locked up Irwin Blum, ten, of 702 East One Hundred Fifty-sixth street, who is alleged to have admitted he turned in the alarm because he "wanted to see how the box worked."

Neck Broken 3 Years, Farmer Didn't Know It

Hightstown, N. Y.—Three years ago Maurice Croshaw, twenty-one years old, son of Elwood Croshaw, a farmer, was milking when the cow kicked and knocked him off his foot-high stool. His neck was injured, but Croshaw thought it merely a bad wrench. An X-ray picture revealed that one of the vertebrae in the neck was fractured and he was taken to the Anderson hospital in Philadelphia, where it was reported that his condition is not serious.

Several times during the three years Croshaw suffered pains in his neck. Both a physician and an osteopath had treated it without discovering the fracture. Ten days ago Croshaw jarred his neck while working over a tractor and it began to swell.

Boy's Body Located by Rooster's Crowing

Bellingham, Wash.—After dynamite and grappling irons had failed to recover the body of Selzur Anderson from the Fraser river, in British Columbia, an old Scandinavian myth proved the means of finding the stream's victim.

Relatives, who are Norwegians, carried a Rhode Island rooster in their boat and rowed about the spot where the lad drowned. Each time the rooster was carried over a certain spot he crowed lustily. True to legend drag hooks immediately grappled the body.

Roosters thus used in Europe when locating drowned persons, according to superstitious ones, were always successful.

Leaps to Death

Milan, Italy.—A seventy-three-year-old man committed suicide recently by jumping from the spire of the cathedral. He was killed instantly. He had been in ill health for some time.

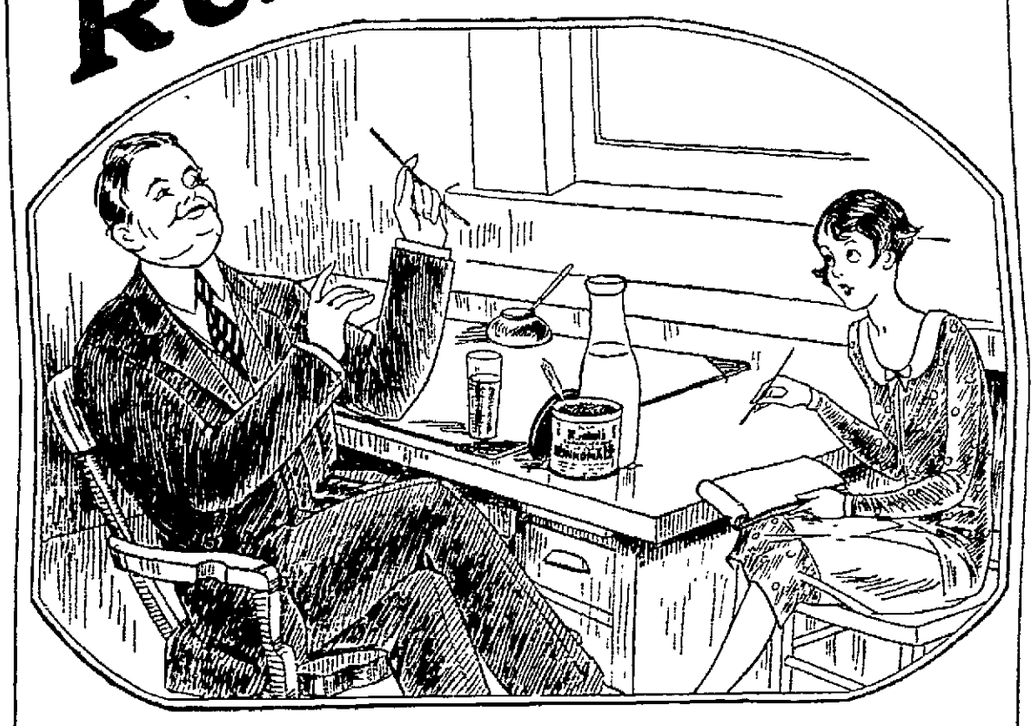
RUNKOMALT

To be sure of the original, look for the name, RUNKEL'S on every can



Take this data, Miss Blake

You see, Miss Blake, I haven't time to go out today, and I really find those heavy luncheons don't agree with me, anyway. I have discovered that a glass or two of milk shaken up with RUNKOMALT is a lunch in itself. Ever try it, Miss Blake?

Oh! is that so? So all you girls have the RUNKOMALT lunch habit?

RUNKOMALT is solving the mid-day lunch problem for many business men and women. When one hates to go out in the heat—or the crowd—when one is hurried for time, or fatigued, or has a noon-day errand to do—send out for a bottle of milk and a can of RUNKOMALT.

The RUNKOMALT office lunch custom makes the afternoon go easier.

Ohio State's Baseball Squad

On paper, Ohio State's baseball team sizes up as a good one from the very fact that four of the nine regulars are sons of former professional stars But in the first half of the current Big Ten campaign, the Buckeyes were able to win only half of their games, although the opinion prevails that they gave at least two of them away

The quartet who are chips off the old diamond, so to speak, are Capt Fred Mackey, catcher, Ray Widdifield, first base, Bobby Riehl, shortstop, and Leon "Red" Ames, Jr., pitcher.

Mackey's father and Riehl's once saw service with the Louisville and Columbus American association teams, respectively. Widdifield's dad used to play in the New York State and International leagues, while "Red" Ames, Sr, is the old National league pitching star All of the sons save Mackey are new to the team, Ames and Riehl being sophomores.

For the rest of the positions, the Ohio Staters are only fairly well fortified with veterans There's Marty Karow, erstwhile shortstop, moved over to second base to make room for Riehl, Tressell at third, and Tarbert in center field Pitchers have been alternating in the other two outfield berths, and Bruce Blanchard, playing in his third campaign, is the alternating pitcher, with Ray Klink, another sophomore, being used as the third choice.

CONGREGATIONALS TAKE S. S. LEAGUE CONTEST.

With Emick on the mound dealing out "cross-word puzzle" curves, the Congregationals of Ponckhockie downed the Redeemer nine in a Sunday School League baseball contest at the Athletic Field Wednesday evening, 6-3

Neither team scored in the initial stanza. The Redeemers sent one man across the rubber in the second but in the third Vic Spalt was nicked frequently and five Ponckhockie warriors passed over home plate It appeared as though the Redeemers would pull their old rally stunt in the fourth when Ed Messinger registered a circuit clout with a man on base but the Redeemer boys failed in their usual accomplishment Messinger's homer terminated their scoring. The Congregationals crossed the plate once during the fourth

Tagging Major League Bases

(By The Associated Press)

Led by the player who fanned at the critical moment in the last world series, the home run hitters of the major leagues have registered a total of 17 circuit blows in the last day's games

Some of the players who slammed for a round trip yesterday were old reliables and some were new in the role of Thor, but Tony Lazzeri's name led all the rest. The Yankee infielder made three home runs in 5 times up against the White Sox at New York

Lazzeri's remarkable batting performance which came within a single run of the record for number of homers in one game, featured a long drawn and thrilling battle which ended with the Yanks on the long end of a 12 to 11 score The 11 inning victory was the Yankees' second in two days over their nearest rivals for the American League lead

Again the defeat was hard for the White Sox to swallow, for they made more hits than the Yankees, just as they did in the previous day's game Also Falk, Clancy and Barrett's homers evened matters for Lazzeri's three home runs

In five games between the two this season, the Yanks have now come off victorious four times and the Sox have yet to win a game at the Yankee Stadium, a fact which might lead teams led by less matter-of-fact men than the magnetic Ray Schalk to believe themselves the victim of an inescapable jinx

Until Yesterday the Pirates apparently had the same kind of an Indian sign on the Giants, but the New Yorkers ended it with an 8 to 7 victory on the wings of Hornsby's over the fence clout in the 9th Home runs by Webb and Wilson enabled the Cubs to down the Robins, 3 to 2, while Fothergill's circuit wallop started a rally which gave Detroit a 5 to 3 edge over the Red Sox

The Cardinals with homers by Bottomley and Schulte had the home run advantage over the Braves, but the visitors tallied a greater number of shorter safe blows and won, 11 to 8 Concentrated hits by the Cincinnati Reds in the later innings accounted for their fourth straight victory, 5 to 4, at the expense of the Phillies. The Quakers thus dropped to seventh place, just above the Reds Under a 7 to 5 beating by the Athletics the St. Louis Browns descended to the second division

Of the eight games only one was unmarked by furious hitting and scoring The Senators' rookie pitcher, Lisenbee, had a bit the better of his duel with Hudlin, Cleveland youngster, and pulled out a 2 to 1 decision His own single in the 9th scored the winning run

C. in the second of a five-game series The Clermonts already have a victory over the club and the fighting attitude of both clubs is expected to draw a large crowd at the Hasbrouck Park diamond The opposing pitchers will be Hahn of the Huttons and V. Lowell Sherman, one of the stage's greatest favorites

"It is a wonderful thing to realize that an actor can indulge in smoking and at the same time retain the quality of his voice necessary to a good performance. I am happy to say that I have found this to be true with Lucky Strikes. So much so that I smoke them both while on and off the stage."

ROSENDALE GRANGE HOLDS MEMORIAL SERVICE

Rosendale, June 9.—A splendid memorial service was held at the Grange Hall and conducted by Henry Mollenhauer at the last meeting.

Brother Fein and Sister Merrihew played the Washington Post March. Flag drill was next in order, John Duffy being the standard bearer. The color guards were Harry Wesp, Matildia Wesp, Liela Mollenhauer and George Kennedy. The Rev. Mr. Cameron addressed the Grangers with past historic war topics, which was followed by a salute of the flag and singing of the Star Spangled Banner. Brother Merrihew recited the Gettysburg address. "Flanders Field" was recited by George Kennedy and "Memorial Day Poem" by Sister Beauvais. The closing song was "America," and prayer was offered by Chaplain Cameron.

This is the first memorial service held by the newly formed Grangers of this town and it was very impressive and well managed.

The next meeting will be held on Monday, June 13, at All Saints' parish house. The lecturer's hour will be conducted by Sister Merrihew.

Preparatory Service.

Preparatory service will be held tonight at 7.45 o'clock at the Rondout Presbyterian Church. A meeting for the reception of new members will be held following the service.

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

Reception Wednesday evening was strong but noisy. Chicago and Cleveland stations were among the best outside WJZ. Those who tuned in on WBBC late enough heard what seemed to be almost a Kingston request number program by Van's Half Moon Orchestra, playing in the Half Moon Hotel at Coney Island. Manager Wartman is a radio fan of the first magnitude and had the orchestra arrange a program especially for his Kingston friends. Among Kingston men and organizations mentioned were Herbert Carl, who it was stated had been a guest at the Half Moon last week, and the Kingston Rotary Club. Those who tuned in earlier doubtless heard a lot of other Kingston names.

President Calvin Coolidge and General H. M. Lord, director of the budget, will address the meeting of the Bureau of the Budget Friday night, June 10, at 9 eastern daylight time of 8. eastern standard time, through WEAF and associated stations of the Red Network. This program was originally scheduled for Saturday, June 11.

"Lindbergh Radio Day" will be observed by WEAF, WJZ and associated stations Saturday, June 11, with the broadcasting of official ceremonies in which the flier will participate in Washington. Beginning at 1 p. m., eastern daylight time, or 12 noon, eastern standard time, listeners will be able to tune in to a description of details along the line of march. They will hear the cheering of the throngs, the music of the band and, finally, at the foot of Washington Monument, the voice of President Coolidge in his presentation of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Captain Lindbergh and his reply. Appropriate programs will then be radiated from the studios of the National Broadcasting Company until 10 eastern daylight time, and 9, eastern standard time, when the proceedings of the reception to be tendered Captain Lindbergh by Secretary Kellogg and the Minnesota Society and the tribute by the National Press Club in Washington, during which Captain Lindbergh will speak, will be broadcast by the WEAF and WJZ hook-ups.

RELIGIOUS GATHERING OF ULSTER ODD FELLOWS.

A basket lunch will be partaken of at 1 o'clock and at 3 o'clock daylight saving time addresses will be delivered by the Rev. John Neander of Saugerties and the Rev. A. J. Coffey of Phoenicia, both members of the order. The public is invited to attend.

GENERAL REVIEW OF CASES OF DISABLED

Following several conferences with Watson B. Miller, chairman of the American Legion's National Rehabilitation committee which maintains offices in Washington, D. C., and is in constant touch with the United States Veterans' Bureau, Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the bureau, has announced his intention of initiating a general review of all cases of disabled veterans who have heretofore carried ratings of less than 10 per cent. The review will be for the purpose of granting increases in rating wherever recent legislation and the terms of the new rating schedule will permit such increases

Chairman Miller has for the last year been urging the director to institute a general review of all classes of disallowed claims, both those where service connection has not been established and those where no compensation was being paid because less than 10 per cent ratings were in effect.

In his announcement, Director Hines states:

"Upon examination into this matter I find that the load of disallowed cases consists of two types; first, those wherein a disability has been disclosed which is due to service, but less than 10 per cent in degree; and second, cases in which either no disease or injury is found, or service connection has not been established for the conditions noted.

"It does not appear necessary to review both types of cases for the reason that the application of the disability rating schedule to the second class of cases would not result in any action favorable to these claimants. Cases of the second class wherein changes of the law with respect to service connection have made possible favorable reconsideration, have been carefully reviewed, in many instances more than once, and I, therefore, do not believe that the review should include cases of this type.

"With respect to the cases wherein a service connected disease or injury has been found to exist but compensation for the resulting disability has been disallowed because less than 10 per cent in degree, or cases wherein compensation has been discontinued under the old schedule for the reason that the disability fell to less than 10 per cent degree, the bureau will conduct a review just as soon as funds are available from which to pay the resulting awards.

"Due to the failure of passage of the deficiency bill at the last session of congress, current expenditures for payment of compensation are being met from the next year's appropriation for this purpose. I have secured the approval of the comptroller general for this use of the funds for current purposes but I doubt the legality of making expenditures due to a review initiated at this particular time.

"I regret exceedingly this situation, but believe that we can complete our plans, issue instructions to the field and clear the track so that the delay in initiating this work will be somewhat compensated by the expedition with which it may later be accomplished."

Complete instructions were issued in May to all regional offices so that the review could be promptly commenced on July 1.

Chairman Miller said it was difficult to give even a rough estimate of the number of claims involved in the review, but that there are many thousands of them. The director's decision to inaugurate the review is considered by Legion officials as a distinct victory in the interest of veteran claimants.

Skyscrapers Are Few

The modern "set-back" skyscrapers of New York are really very ancient in their architecture, according to John Roosval, distinguished Swedish art critic, who contributes an article on them to the Forum Magazine. Babylonian architecture was also terraced, says Mr. Roosval, and so were many of the piles reared by the ancient Aztec and Mayan builders of Central America.

But though he does not regard the "new" skyscrapers as being really very new, Mr Roosval likes them much better than the earlier American style in skyscrapers. "The older skyscrapers," he writes in his Forum article, "those in New York, in lower Manhattan, stand like wild elephants let loose among downtrodden sheep."

Money in Jack Rabbits

An interesting development in the control of jack rabbits, which are a serious pest in Idaho and several other Western states, has been the establishment of a market for black-tailed jack rabbit skins. Through the efforts of an employee of the United States biological survey two fur companies are maintaining offices in southern Idaho and are paying from 40 to 50 cents a pound for thoroughly dried and properly stretched skins. This means six to seven cents apiece, as it takes six or seven skins to make a pound, says the Pathfinder Magazine.

Men in Idaho are putting out poison and collecting and skinning 250 rabbits a day on the average, not only to help to keep down the numbers of the pest, but to gain a good income for the time spent.

Princeton also has begun to ask, if college is a good place to send a boy to, why give him an automobile to get away from it?

Too many young men are committing suicide. Education should teach men to face the future and not tempt them to evade it.

HOW

MAGIC NOTES OF FLUTE CHARM DEADLY COBRAS.—The secret of charming the deadly cobra was recently revealed to students at the University of Pennsylvania by Dr. Nirmal Das, of India. "The ability of the Hindus to charm snakes is no myth," said Doctor Das, "for they can charm the most vicious ones through the soft melodious music of the flute. Snakes become hypnotized under music played on the flute and become harmless. The player stands at the edge of a forest in which the cobras live and plays softly up and down the scale in a soothing, enticing manner. After an hour or so, several of the snakes will emerge from the forest and stand almost upright, waving their heads from side to side with the music. At the end of another hour they will lie with their heads on the ground like a man falling into a sleep from drugs. The Hindu then catches they by the throat and extracts their fangs, after which they are comparatively harmless." According to Doctor Das the flute used by the Hindu snake charmers is of a specially constructed kind, having three chambers to enable the player to play for more than three hours without a pause. (There must never be a pause in the music or the charm will be broken.) One chamber is like that of the regular wind instrument and is played by blowing into it; a second is played while he is inhaling air, and the third chamber stores air to be used while the player is resting.—Pathfinder Magazine.

How Lengthy "Briefs" Got Illogical Name

Laymen have often wondered why in the legal profession briefs are so called, when as a rule, owing to the more or less elaborate legal phraseology, they are anything but brief. A lawyer explains that this name was given because such documents "are supposed to cover the necessary subject matter in as brief a space as possible." It is also pointed out that many of the "whereases," and "aforesaids" and the "to wits" are really essential.

Although the uninitiated may still flounder in the mazes of law technicalities, modern briefs are very much less encumbered with verbiage than were the briefs of earlier days. The modern tendency is to simplify.

Writing long legal documents used to be profitable, because, to begin with, they were prepared by scriveners who were paid by the word. An amusing story is told of a certain ancient scrivener in England who has lived through the ages because he perpetrated the most voluminous brief ever evolved in the profession. It was so prodigiously long that the authorities thought the time for reform had come. They decided to make of him an example. The wordy manuscript was affixed to a placard board, and as punishment the scrivener was forced to parade with it all about the town.

How to Test the Ear

How accurate is the ear? Tests have been made recently on musicians, and even their ears are not 100 per cent accurate.

A tuning fork of a certain pitch can be sounded, then silenced, another tuning fork of a slightly different pitch can be sounded, and the musician taking the test will swear they are the same note. If one of the forks has a vibration rate of 1,000 per second and the next one vibrates 1,005 times per second, few if any musicians will be able to tell the difference.

This, however, is a high degree of accuracy. Middle C has 261 vibrations a second, and the next pure tone on the major scale, D, has 293 a second—quite a gap as compared to 1,000 and 1,005.

How to "Weather" Pine

A solution containing equal parts of sulphate of iron and water will produce a weathered pine effect. Apply with a sponge. This solution will raise the grain of the wood somewhat and it will be necessary to sandpaper the surface after the stain has thoroughly dried. A second method is to use lampblack to which has been added a small quantity of raw umber, thinned with one-third turpentine and two-thirds oil, and a small amount of drier. Try this on a piece of wood before the actual application to determine the depth of tone required.

How Coal Originated

The origin of coal takes one back thousands of years to prehistoric times, when, according to geologys, parts of the earth were covered with a plant growth of gigantic size. These huge plants or trees became submerged and in the course of ages under pressure caused by earthquakes or glacial ice, were turned into coal, which is a condensed form of carbon.

How Flint Rock Is Cut

While it is a fact that flint is so much harder than steel that a knife drawn across a piece of flint will leave a metallic deposit on the stone, flint is exceedingly brittle and easily flaked. It is chipped off in the direction in which the flakes run.

No One Immune From Pangs of "Mal-de-Mer"

Doctors Cury and Bohec have an interesting article on seasickness in Esculape (a medical journal). Oddly enough, very few of the ancient writers seems to have concerned themselves with the affliction; neither Plato nor Aristotle makes any allusion to it. On the other hand, the ocean was considered a sovereign panacea for all sorts of ills.

Plutarch, however, mentions seasickness, which he attributes to fear, and it is sufficiently evident that our remote forefathers were not immune. In this connection it may be recalled that, according to Seneca, Cicero, prince of orators, fleeing the wrath of Antony and his wife, Flavia, whom he had attacked in his "Philippics," took refuge on board a ship and decided, when the vessel had put to sea, that he would rather surrender to the executioner than endure the torments of seasickness. He was put ashore and assassinated near Formiae.—From Le Matin, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Odd Maze of Words Applied to Costume

Near the close of the Eighteenth century, in France, some mysterious, semi-poetical name was bestowed on every kind of dress fabric, trimming and cut. The following description of the costume of a famous actress-courtesan is an example:

"She was attired in a robe of stifled sighs, adorned with superfluous regrets, the point edged with perfect candor, trimmed with indiscreet complaints. She wore ribbons of marked attentions, and shoes of the color of the queen's hair (Marie Antoinette's) embroidered with diamonds in treacherous stripes. Above her curls of elevated sentiments was a head-dress of certain conquest, trimmed with fickle feathers, while over her shoulders fell an Absalom tress of momentary agitation."

All that reads like gibberish today yet it was perfectly understood by the great ladies of 1788.—Detroit News.

To Perpetuate His Name

Greeley wrote in his "Recollections of a Busy Life": "Fame is a vapor; popularity an accident; riches take wings; the only earthly certainty is oblivion; no man can foresee what a day can bring forth; while those who cheer today will often curse tomorrow; and yet I cherish the hope that the journal I projected and established will live and flourish long after I shall have moldered into forgotten dust, being guided by a larger wisdom, a more unerring sagacity to discern the right, though not by an unfaltering readiness, to embrace and defend it at whatever personal cost, and that the stone which covers my ashes may bear to future eyes the still indistinguishable inscription, 'Founder of the New York Tribune.'"—From "Horace Greeley," by Don C. Seitz.

Irish Vistas

On a Tipperary Road, Ireland.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

IRELAND, which holds such a secure place in many hearts, is not a large country. The longest line of land which can be drawn is three hundred miles—from Fair Head, in the northeast, to Mizen Head, in the southwest. Taking the country as a rough lozenge, the short diagonal from northwest to southeast is about two hundred miles.

The terrain itself may be roughly divided into three parts: a mountainous region in the north, an equally mountainous region in the south, and a great central plain.

The mountains in the north of Ireland are a geological continuation of those of Scotland, and those of the south a like continuation of the Welsh mountains. The Irish Central plain is opposite what in England is called by soldiers the Chester gap and so, naturally, the Irish Central plain is England's logical and only military outlet to the northwest.

The rich and fertile province of Meath was the possession of whatever tribe in Ireland could take and hold it. In earliest days Dublin and its Liffey was not the principal site of the Irish kings, but Tara, in Meath, and Boyne, with its lush meadow grass and its infinity of salmon. In the southwest Limerick was hardly less important. Limerick was protected on the west by the Atlantic and on the east by the wide and dangerous Shannon. The Shannon is considered the real military frontier of Ireland in the west. The greatest of English soldiers, the Lord Protector Cromwell, did not dare to invade Connacht (Connaught).

What you will see as a visitor in Ireland depends on your own mind. Names, little crannies in cities, will work their white eery magic on you.

The walls of Derry (Londonderry) will make your heart beat faster, for no gallantry in Froissart rivaled that of the thirteen apprentice boys who locked the gates against James of the Fleeing and held the city for eight long months, not only against King James, but against famine and pestilence.

Things to See and Think About.

On Lough Erne you will find that Saint Patrick's purgatory which enthralled the mind of medieval Europe and which is still a place of devout pilgrimage.

At Ballyshannon you may be fortunate enough to see the salmon, lying packed like sardines, awaiting the opportune moment to spring up the Falls of Assaroe, springing sixteen feet in the air against the foaming roaring water.

At Muckross the fantastic cliffs will hold you. In that one named the Market House you will see a blood brother of the rock out of which the African sculptor hewed the fearsome Sphinx.

In Donegal you will see the desolate Rosses, a tangle of small lakes and great granite boulders, and he who loses his way in that desert by night is the most luckless of beings. The great mountain of Donegal is Errigal, and its white cap is not snow but white quartz. From its top, on a fair day, you can see the Scottish Hebrides, Islay and Jura, floating on the water like young brown gulls.

From Horn Head, sometimes out of a mist will emerge the rocky battlements of Tory island, like something evoked by an enchanter's wand. The roar of the Atlantic crashing into that cavern known as MacSwine's Gun will shake the stoutest heart.

Belfast is about as Irish a city as Paisley is. It is of no antiquity and, except for commerce, of no importance; but within easy reach of it are the blue Mourne mountains, the great Glen of Downpatrick, where the country folk say that St. Patrick, St. Bridget, and St. Columkille are all three buried.

Near Castle Upton are some ruined buildings of the Knights Templars, of interest as a minor establishment founded by the Knights who escaped to Harris.

At Antrim is the greatest round tower of Ireland, nearly one hundred feet high. Near the town is Lough Neagh, the largest lake in the British Isles, bordered with orchards.

At Ballingerry Jeremy Taylor wrote his most important works, and near it, at Whiteabbey, Anthony Trollope wrote his autobiography. Near Carrickfergus, at Kilroot, Dean Swift had a living for a small time.

Nine Glens of Antrim.

North of Belfast, at Larne, begin the Nine Glens of Antrim: Glenarm, Glencloy, Glenariff, Glen Ballyemon, Glenaan, Glencorp, Glendun, Glensheask, and Glentow. Near Cushendall is Ossian's grave. Thackeray called Glenariff a miniature Switzerland.

North of Antrim is Rathlin island, or Raghery, as the Gaels call it. The stormy sea between Ireland and Raghery is called Sloch-na-mara, or Gullet of the Ocean, and can only be sailed over in the finest of weather. Here is Bruce's refuge. It is a gallant little island, with an immensity of birds. It is mentioned not only by Charles Kingsley, but by Ptolemy.

Near Ballycastle is the famous Carrick-a-Rede, a ropewalk over a chasm sixty feet wide and ninety deep, a couple of planks lashed together by rope. The handrail, also a rope, swings away from you as you cross.

The Giant's Causeway, near by, is more curious than beautiful. The best time to see it is in a gale, when the tessellated terraces are assaulted by a cavalry of foam. Parts of it are called by fantastic names: the Honeycomb, Lord Antrim's Parlor, the Organ, the Giant's Loom, the Gateway, and the Lady's Fan.

Howth is northward, with the small islands of Ireland's Eye and Lambay. Through Swords and Malahide one travels to Drogheda, whose walls still show the effect of the lord protector's cannon, and whose river, the Boyne, shows so little effect of Ireland's greatest battle.

Westward of Drogheda is Newgrange, famous for its Druid burial mound, with a passage of great stones forty-eight feet long leading into a stone-roofed chamber. It is the oldest Celtic monument in Europe. The Norsemen are supposed to have rifled it, so that no man knows what it contained.

Tallaght, near Dublin, is the great burial place of the legendary legions of Parthelon, who died of the plague. Kingstown is so modern as to be vulgar. Bray and Dalkey are pretty little coast towns.

Wicklow and Vale of Avoca.

Going in Wicklow, you enter a world of glens, like Glen of the Downs, the Devil's glen, and mountain lakes like Tay and Lough Dan. Glendalough, or the "Glen of Two Lakes," as the Gaelic name means, is a deep, solitary glen in a wild region, the upper lake of which has something terribly sinister about it. Here are the ruins of seven churches, which have stood for upward of twelve hundred years, and a round tower. It is the site of the hermitage of St. Kevin.

The Vale of Avoca and the Meeting of the Waters are the prettiest spots in Leinster. The scenery of Leinster seems to have a feminine, soft quality.

The road from Dublin to Killarney passes through Maryborough and Thurles, in which latter city Silken Thomas, the Earl of Kildare, burned the great cathedral in 1495 because he thought the archbishop was inside.

Moeroom castle, on the Kerry road, is the birthplace of Admiral Sir William Penn, the father of the founder of Pennsylvania. Gougane Barra is a place of the most dark and beautiful aspect. Steep mountains and a lake like black marble, and trembling silver rivers shining into the dark water.

The English poet, William Wordsworth, writing about Killarney, says: "In point of scenery this is the finest portion of the British Isles," which is treason to his own lake country. The name Killarney means "Church of the sloe bushes." The lakes are three: the Upper or McCarthy Moore's lake; the Middle or Torc lake; the Lower is called in the Gaelic Lough Leane.

In the Gap of Dunloe, the brawling Loe river expands into little lakes of water remarkable for their blueness.

The Golden MacGillicuddy's reeks and the Purple mountains stand around this district like sentinels.

Firemen Will Meet Tonight

This evening representatives of the volunteer fire companies of the city will meet at the Central Fire Station to decide the question of whether an invitation will be extended to the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association to hold its 1928 convention in Kingston. An invitation has been extended to the Chamber of Commerce, the Uptown and Downtown Business Men's Associations and other civic organizations to meet with the firemen. The common council will be represented by a committee of five. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock.

Improved Violin Bow

A new type of violin bow, or rather a rediscovery of a very old type, which permits the playing of four-part music on a single instrument, has recently been demonstrated in Berlin by a widely known virtuoso, Herman Berkowski. The bow is deeply curved instead of straight, as in the usual form, and the strings are left very loose. It resembles the bows shown in medieval pictures of performers on the ancient Celtic chrotta or crewth; the ancestor of the violin. It is said that the new bow makes possible the rendition of early violin scores, which have hitherto been riddles to present-day performers because they called for the simultaneous reaching of strings impossible to the straight bow.

East Indian Extravagance

Refrigerators for long cold drinks, a coat of camouflage, of jungle green, special racks for firearms and protective fenders fore and aft to keep off charging tigers, are features of a shooting automobile recently designed for the rajah of Nadapore. This 50-horse power motor was built at a cost of $20,000 and holds six people. The maharaja of Gwalior, however, has gone his neighbor one better by sporting a complete motor caravan for hunting. A coach car and coach trailer provide parlor, bedroom, bath and kitchenette for a retinue of 16 people. Electric lights to dazzle and bewilder animals at night are a part of the equipment.

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 9 (AP).—Confusing price movements again characterized today's stock market. A brisk buying movement developed in the rails at the opening but, except in a couple of southern carriers, died out by early afternoon. Standard industrials held fairly steady, but wide fluctuations again took place in a number of specialties, particularly those in which pools were believed to be active.

Call money was again in plentiful supply today, and the rate dropped to four per cent after renewing at 4¼. Speculators for the advance bid up their favorites in expectation that the July reinvestment demand would be unusually large this year and that the low yields obtainable on most high grade bonds would stimulate the purchase of seasoned dividend paying stocks.

Rails showed surprising strength in the face of another decline in car loadings and the denial of reports that the New Haven railroad has sold or given an option on its New York, Ontario and Western holdings. Atlantic Coast line was bid up seven points but an early gain of 4½ points in Lehigh Valley was cancelled by the end of the third hour. New peaks in that group were registered by Reading, Rock Island, Norfolk and Southern, Texas and Pacific, Illinois Central and several others.

Weakness cropped out in the coal shares, Pittsburgh Terminal Coal breaking six points and Pittsburgh 3½. American Brown Boveric, Electric Refrigeration, Ward Baking B and Loose Wiles also were conspicuously heavy.

American Smelting, National Distillers, Hudson Motors and Manhattan Electric Supply changed hands in large volume at advancing prices. American Brake Shoe and Foundry, Union Tank Car, Remington Rand, Erie Steam Shovel and Otis Steel preferred were among the score or so highs in the industrial group.

Reforestation Going On

During the year ending June 30, 1926, more than 25,000,000 trees produced in state forest nurseries were distributed to farmers; 13,000,000 were distributed to planters other than farmers; and 14,000,000 were planted on state lands. At the rate of 1,000 trees to the acre the total output of state nurseries during the year was enough to put 52,000 acres of idle land to work. The total area needing reforestation through planting, however, is more than 80,000,000 acres.

Fewer Umbrellas Used

A steady decline in the demand for umbrellas the last ten years, is reported by manufacturers. Fifteen years ago nearly everyone carried an umbrella. Some homes kept one for each member of the family and an extra to lend to the visitor who got caught in a shower. Today people are not carrying them. The automobile is the reason, H. I. Phillips tells us. Now almost as many automobiles are lost as were umbrellas 20 years ago.—Capper's Weekly.

UNCERTAINTY OF ROADS LESSENED

The 80,000 miles of main roads which have been designated by state and federal officials as United States highways constitute a system of transcontinental roads, as distinguished from the larger federal aid highway system, which is designed to serve the greater volume of shorter distance interstate travel, according to Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of good roads.

The roads selected conform as nearly to the natural lines of transcontinental travel as determined by those best fitted by intimate, official knowledge of highway and traffic conditions to make the selection. All of the roads are parts of the state highway systems and are or will be included in the federal aid system.

Their improvement is, therefore, definitely provided for in the programs of the several states. It is, in fact, already well advanced, especially in the eastern and Pacific states; and complete improvement of the entire system at the earliest possible date is assured.

The numbering system which has been devised will reduce uncertainty of direction to a minimum. The numbers of the through routes are made up of two digits only, and these numbers on the standard United States shields, easily and quickly recognizable at frequent intervals, will enable the motorist to follow the routes without stopping for direction.

All north-and-south roads will have odd numbers, the east-and-west roads even numbers, as determined by the general direction of the routes. Cross-over routes and important branches will have numbers composed of the principal main road with which they connect and a prefixed third digit. Branches of route 50, for example, will be indicated by the numerals 150, 250, etc.

The standard danger and cautionary signs will be easily distinguishable under practically all conditions of atmosphere and light by their yellow color.

The character of the danger will be clearly indicated by appropriate words in large letters and standardized graphic symbols, and even the color-blind and illiterate will be warned of the presence of danger by the shape of the signs.

The octagonal sign, wherever encountered, will mean extreme danger, call for a complete stop. The round sign will give warning of a railroad crossing ahead. The diamond-shaped sign will indicate approach to curves, road crossings, or hills sufficiently dangerous to require the exercise of caution; and the square sign will be used only in the vicinity of schools, hospitals or other places of lesser or occasional danger.

Finally, in order that the traveler may be fully informed, large rectangular white signs boldly lettered in black will announce speed limits, distances to cities and towns, and the names of streams and other natural features.

Making Roads Wider and Thicker Is Big Problem

Strengthening and widening roads is the great highway problem of the future, according to Engineering News-Record. Roads will not require thickening as soon as they will need widening.

Eventually all states will be expending vast sums in providing a greater paved width and in thickening pavement to carry heavier loads.

There is little obsolescence lost in the modern paved road structure, the News-Record opines and it cites the experience of several states in which virtually all of the old roads widened or thickened were salvaged.

Waste occurs where an old road has to be torn out entirely. If the right kind of base is put in the original road can be widened, thickened or resurfaced without appreciable waste.

Cast-Iron Being Tested in France for Paving

Cast iron is being tried out as paving material at Le Mans.

Ten tons of plates are being laid on a part of a main highway, the Avenue Leon Bollee, named after the automobile designer, and the experiment is being watched by engineers.

Old iron has been shipped out of France in great quantities and General Gascouin long has urged that it be used for paving.

The government's chief of road engineers designed a paving plate, sufficiently rough to prevent horses and cattle from slipping, but suitable, above all, for automobile traffic.

Highway Problems

The highway engineer is bringing science to bear upon the solution of the problems of highway safety, says Professor Steinberg of Baltimore. Today but a very small percentage of accidents on our main roads can be attributed directly to engineering defects. No public work is of greater importance than that of widening and extending our present roads, as well as paving new ones, to meet our constantly increasing need for adequate highway facilities.

War starts in the Balkans so frequently that the idea of sending missionaries to that region might be hopefully considered.

The man who fell seven stories without serious injury ought to be able to write a corking good rubber heel advertisement.

NO PERIOD WITHOUT CRADLE AND BABY

Earliest Component Parts of Civilization

The cradle is thought to be as old as civilization. At any rate it is a very ancient piece of furniture that had its place in the very earliest homes. It has come down through the ages together with the many cradle songs. During its existence many styles have been used, and baby has slept in the tree-tops and in all degrees of magnificence. The date when the cradle first assumed its characteristic swinging or rocking is not known, but the small four-posted beds on rockers were common before the Fourteenth century. As early as 1228 the cradle was used to impart to the people of Assisi the real meaning of the Incarnation, says a writer in the Pathfinder Magazine.

The oldest form of cradle known is an oblong oak box without a lid. Originally rockers on cradles were detachable, but like other household appliances this one has been subject to the changes of fashion in shape, adornment, etc. The original and simple shape persisted for several centuries, then the hood made its appearance. During its time the cradle has been paneled, carved, inlaid, and mounted in gilded bronze. In the Eighteenth century cradles became very elaborate, especially those used for state occasions. In modern times they have become lighter and simpler, the old hood usually being left off entirely or replaced by draped curtains. It was about the middle of the Nineteenth century that iron cradles were introduced along with iron bedsteads. Now this ancient article is more often called the "bassinet." Bassinets are usually made of delicate wood frames, iron frames or wicker.

In this country the Indian mother still hangs "baby, cradle and all" to the branch of a tree, where the wind rocks the little red bundle off to sleep. These cradles are usually made of a framework of bark, very warmly lined and packed into a sort of shoe, then both baby and cradle are strapped with reindeer thongs and lashed to the tree. The value of one superior Indian cradle is said to be equivalent to the value of a good horse. Some American babies take over the old family clothes basket (sometimes a new one) for their cradle, while others have elaborate bassinets lined with fancy silks and satins. In all lands cradles are inevitably connected with songs. Generations of mothers have sung: "Hushaby baby in the tree-top" and others.

Defies Passing Years

Auto traffic does not bother John Fitzpatrick, who recently celebrated his one hundred and first birthday at his home in London. "He enjoys every minute of life," said his daughter-in-law. "He likes nothing better than his pipe, and sometimes indulges in a cigarette. When he goes out for a stroll the traffic seems to hold no terrors for him. In fact, he almost dictates to the drivers when he wishes to cross the road. He simply stands still and dares the traffic until the drivers pull up and allow him to cross the road. When I have difficulty with needle and thread he takes them from me and passes the thread through the eye without the least trouble."

The Two Critics

Sherwood Anderson, the novelist, said on his return from Paris:

"In Paris, one day, I went to an exhibition of spring fashions at a famous dressmaker's in the Rue de la Paix.

"Two elderly women sat behind me, and when a tall mannequin came out in a very audacious evening gown I heard one of them give a snort and say:

"'That creature is a caricature.'

"'A caricature?' said the other woman. 'Oh, no. Jane. Not a caricature. A takeoff.'"—Minneapolis Tribune.

Airman's Camera

The camera used by the aviator in plotting the view below is a marvel of ingenuity. Its operation is almost automatic and when an exposure is made there is a permanent and complete record made of time, altitude, number of the film, angle of the machine at the time, date and data about the lens. A special film has been made for the newest camera, which is the largest film ever spooled. It is sixty-five feet long, sufficient for 100 exposures.

Relic of Cliff Dwellers

The lost burial grounds of the Casa Grande (Ariz.) cliff dwellers, probably a thousand years old, have been found by an expedition from the Southwest museum, Los Angeles. A funeral urn of beautifully shaded red on buff coloring and containing bone fragments and ashes of the dead was the first finding of the expedition. It revealed that two forms of burial—cremation and earth interment—were used by the cliff dwellers.

Soles Glued on Shoes

The mending of shoes has been greatly facilitated by a foreign system of cementing the new sole over the old one in place of sewing. It requires the use of a cement which has been made for the purpose and which is entirely waterproof. The parts are held together in heated clamps while the union is being made. The new process is said to be much more rapid than the old and more economical.

A fashion note says the bathing suits are to be briefer, but that can't be unless the new ones are worn by smaller girls.

Fairy tale: Once upon a time there was a man who owned a diamond ring and hunted up the assessor to tell him about it.

White Signs With Cincinnati

Johnny White, for the past three years the valuable short stop of the Fordham University team, and a former Colonial player, signed on the dotted line Wednesday morning to play with the Cincinnati Reds whom he will join at once. White is the second Fordham man to be called by the Cincinnati Reds, following Nick Carter who played third sack for the school last year. Carter at present is playing at Peoria.

White is the possessor of keen ability with the stick and last year held his average well over the .400 mark. This year despite a wrenched ankle sustained early in the season he has managed to bat over the .300 register.

Lindbergh Will Get State Medal

Medal of Valor to Be Presented In New York City on Monday by Governor Smith—Twelfth of Its Kind.

Albany, N. Y., June 9 (AP).—The twelfth Medal of Valor ever awarded by New York state will be presented to Charles A. Lindbergh by Governor Alfred E. Smith in New York city next Monday.

The decoration, authorized in 1894, is given for "acts of valor" performed by officers or enlisted men of the National Guard or Naval Militia in the discharge of their duties. Lindbergh's medal, made of solid silver and mounted on a blue ribbon, bears on its obverse a citation summarizing his transatlantic flight. On the face the word "Valor" appears, together with an embossed shield and a pair of crossed guns.

In receiving the medal Lindbergh, himself a member of the Missouri National Guard will join the select ranks of the eleven men who in the past thirty-three years have been decorated for personal heroism.

The first award was made in July, 1915, when three medals were conferred upon Guardsmen who saved several comrades from drowning in Sprout Brook at Fishkill Plains during the summer training period. These heroes were Captain William R. Jackson, First Sergeant William G. Keegan and Sergeant John Cuthbert, all of the 14th Infantry.

Other recipients of the cross are: Horseshoer Alexander R. McMullen, Battery D, 2nd Field Artillery for "gallant and conspicious courage" displayed at Camp Bragg, N. C., on August 24, 1920, in saving several persons from probable death by stopping a team of runaway artillery horses.

Sergeant Julian N. Stahlschmidt, 27th Tank Company, who on May 30, 1922, at New York city, gave his own life to stop a runaway tank.

Ensign William P. Shea, S. C. 2d Battalion, and Fireman 3rd Class Edward Menzies, 2d Battalion, Naval Militia, who made an unsuccessful attempt to save a drowning canoeist in the Hudson off Fort Washington Point, New York city, June 10, 1922.

Corporal Frederick Brooks and Private John Lowell, Company E, 71st Infantry, for rescuing a private from drowning at Roa Hook, near the summer camp at Peekskill, July 24, 1923.

In loving memory of our dear mother and wife, Rachel Harrington, who passed the ninth of June, 1929.

Dearest mother, thou has left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But it's God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
When in heaven in joy to greet thee
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Spring Yearnings

This is the season of the year when we would like to own a little country place—if it were not so far from town.

When we would like to raise chickens—if it weren't so much trouble to take care of them.

When we would like to have a nice little garden—if it weren't that spading gives one a kink in the back.

And to walk to the office every morning—if it weren't so far and the sidewalks weren't so hard, and if it were not so clearly a public duty to patronize the street cars.—Boston Transcript.

Great Not All From World's High Places

Who would have expected that Goliath's antagonist would emerge from the quiet pastures? "Genius hatches her offspring in strange places." Very humble homes are the birthplaces of mighty emancipations, once said the late Doctor Jowett.

There was a little farm at St. Ives, and the farmer lived a quiet and unsensational life. But the affairs of the nation became more and more confused and threatening. Monarchical power despoiled the people's liberties, and tyranny became rampant. And out from the little farm strode Oliver Cromwell, the ordained of God, to emancipate his country.

There was an obscure rectory at Epworth. The doings in the little rectory were just the quiet practices of simple homes in countless parts of England. And England was becoming brutalized, because its religious life was demoralized. The church was asleep, and the devil was wide awake! And forth from the humble rectory strode John Wesley, the appointed champion of the Lord, to enthuse, to purify, and to sweeten the life of the people.

On what quiet farm is the coming deliverer now laboring? Who knows? —Exchange.

Spirit of Tolerance Recompense for Age

I would not advise anyone to grow old without tolerably good health. There are innumerable rules for preserving that, but the best one is common sense. Muscle and health are not the same thing. Some of the most athletic men I have known worried most about their health.

Hardly anything is worse for health than fussing about it. Probably just fussing—pointless fretting, stewing and boiling over—makes as much trouble in the world as anything else. Particularly, I should say, fussing about one's neighbors; raging and fretting because other persons will not do what you believe they ought to do, or think or vote as you would have them. It is worth while to grow old if only to learn the peace that passeth understanding which comes merely from a willingness to let other persons alone.

Perhaps only experienced age can consider, with a free and untrustful heart, that its neighbors have a perfect right to wear red flannel underclothes and hang them over the front porch railing to dry if they wish to. Having achieved that state of mind, one is in a condition to enjoy life.—Will Payne in the Saturday Evening Post.

Friends

After all this, treat thy friend nobly, love to be with him, do to him all the worthinesses of love and fair endearment, according to thy capacity and his . . . Give him gifts and upbraid him not, and refuse not his kindnesses, and be sure never to despise the smallness or the impropriety of them . . . So must the love of friends sometimes be refreshed with material and low caresses, lest by striving to be too divine it becomes less human: it must be allowed its share of both: it is human in giving pardon and fair construction, and openness and ingenuity, and keeping secrets; it hath something that is divine because it is beneficent; but much because it is eternal.—Jeremy Taylor.

Unfortunate Letter

In English the letter "e" occurs most frequently, says Frank H. Vizetelly, the dictionary sharp. But it is the most unfortunate character in the alphabet because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger and in hell all the time. It has its bright side, too, for it is never in war and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life and no heaven. It is the center of honesty, makes love perfect, and without it there would be no editors, no printers, no news and no announcers!—Exchange.

Sterling Silver

Sterling silver is silver of a guaranteed purity, which is 925 parts of pure silver in 1,000 parts of the metal; the remainder is copper. The Federal Hallmark act of 1906, relating to gold and silver in interstate and foreign commerce, forbids the marking or labeling of silver as "sterling" unless it is within four thousandths of this standard. Articles marked "coin silver" should contain 900 parts of pure silver in 1,000 parts of the metal.

The Adventure Called Life

THE fiction writer would have us believe that real life is a colorless, hum-drum affair. So he attempts to improve on reality by creating characters and situations out of his fanciful mind.

But it is the adventure of life itself that claims our deepest interest. We are fascinated by what our neighbors are thinking and doing. Their hopes, fears, joys, sorrows, temptations and struggles are much like our own, and are therefore of immediate and vital concern.

That is why the personal narratives of human experience which appear in True Story Magazine have such a widespread and ever-growing appeal. For example, there are 16 thrilling features in the July issue. Your newsdealer has it. Get your copy today!

Rehearsals for Pageant Dances

The boys who are to take part in the Indian War Dance will rehearse on Saturday morning at ten o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. on Henry street, not the Y. M. C. A.

The girls of the Peace Dance will rehearse at the same place at eleven o clock.

Boys and girls must be on time as the rehearsals will begin promptly on the hour. These dances are now full and no more names are wanted

Please do not telephone to Mrs. Chandler or write notes asking her to reply. There are hundreds of people taking part in this Pageant and it is manifestly impossible to write to or call up all these people.

Those who wish to take part in the Pageant as early settlers and were unable to attend the meeting at the high school Tuesday evening, may leave their names at the Home Bureau office, 286 Wall street, the basement entrance next to the First Dutch Church Cemetery, and there they may obtain all information regarding costumes and learn what is expected of them.

Crude Water Heaters Used by Old Romans

Even so generally used and useful a thing as hot water in generous quantities is a development of very modern times. For thousands of years primitive, laborious methods were the only means for having hot water. This condition was but little improved up to less than a generation ago.

The first water heater known dates back some 2,000 years. This was the "abenum" of the Romans, a crude bronze kettle with a handle for swinging over an open fire. The "focolus," an apparently later device, was a metal container into which hot stones were put to heat the water surrounding them. This seems to have been the best water heater the early Romans were able to devise.

During the Elizabethan age in England the people were notoriously unwashed. Perhaps it was because the teakettle was their only source of hot water supply. In 1809, when gas for fuel and light became a public utility, the desire and need for hot water became easier to fill. With the development of the gas stove, hot water began to flow more freely.

East Credited With Idea of Gunpowder

Gunpowder was made in the Middle ages much as it is now, except that the processes were not so refined, and the product cruder and weaker. Gunpowder is a mixture consisting of potassium nitrate, sulphur and charcoal. The origin of it is involved in considerable uncertainty, but it is believed to have been discovered in the ancient East.

As far as Europe is concerned, Roger Bacon, the Thirteenth-century alchemist and philosopher, is sometimes spoken of as its inventor. At any rate he set down the formula in this fashion in 1270:

"Mix together saltpetre with lura nop cum ubre and sulphur, and you will make thunder and lightning, if you know the mode of mixing." The four seemingly meaningless words in the middle are simply a transposition of the letters of carbonum pulvere or charcoal.

Statesmen's Varying Ideas

Alexander Hamilton proposed that the President of the United States be elected for life. Others in the Constitutional convention favored two or three Presidents instead of one.

LEGATEES NEED TO BE HEARTY EATERS

Graded Feasts Provided by Will of German.

There is an indelible streak of romanticism in most Germans that time and expatriation cannot dim. Fritz Bernard Behr was a German even though he spent his entire life in England and won his coterie of friends among the most Britannic of the "tight little isle." Listen to the names of his seven friends: Frederick Cyril Jenkins, Alexander Wilson, Stanley Greenfield, Frank Greenfield, Reginald Halsey, Arthur Reginald Baines and Cosmo Hamilton. Many will recognize only the last, but all will testify to the solid British quality of the lot. Well, the other day Fritz Bernard Behr died in London, leaving an estate of approximately $80,000. Of this, by will, Fritz left $1,500 in trust, the income from which was to be used annually by the seven friends named above for a dinner to be attended by all of them and to be held when and where they wished. This annual feed was to continue as long as two of the cronies remained alive, and when all were dead but one this last table companion should dine in solitary, retrospective and memorial splendor and then should draw down as his own the $1,500 capital and end the game.

If no better than 4 per cent were received on the money there would be $60 to expend on the seven dinners, or $8.57 the plate, but as the companions, in turn, pass away the diners will be faced by ever more elaborate banquets until the last couple will be obliged to eat $30 worth. And the lonely last man will have to meet the supreme test of putting away a $60 feed. We cannot say, of course, that the deceased Fritz had any ulterior motive in his arrangement and that he desired to hasten the reassembly of his group of friends on the farther shore, but it is rather probable that such a result would follow these progressively great feats of gourmandism. No, we will not accuse Herr Fritz of any such thought, and will set the idea down to a romanticism that, otherwise directed, might have created a first-rate movie scenario.

Manners and Breeding

I make a difference between good manners and good breeding; although, in order to vary my expression, I am sometimes forced to confound them. By the first I only understand the art of remembering and applying certain settled forms of behavior. But good breeding is of a much larger extent; for besides an uncommon degree of literature sufficient to qualify a gentleman for reading a play, or a political pamphlet, it takes in a great compass of knowledge; no less than that of fighting, dancing, gaming, making the circle of Italy, riding the great horse, and speaking French, not to mention some other secondary or subaltern accomplishments, which are more easily acquired. — Jonathan Swift.

Natural Act Reversed

Last summer a bantam hen belonging to W. L. Fairfield, rancher of Mission Acres, Calif., decided to do something more useful than laying an egg. The only egg available at the time was a turkey egg, which Fairfield put under the little chicken and which later hatched and grew under the care of the bantam. After a time the bantam was unable to brood the chick under its wing because the turkey was soon twice as large as the hen. Not at all puzzled by this situation, the bantam fell into the habit of crawling under the turkey to keep warm at night, and ever since has kept up the custom.

Electric Traffic Register

One of the latest adaptations of the photo-electric cell is for the purpose of counting the number of automobiles that pass a given point in a day, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Installed on a lamp-post on one side of the street and exposed to a source of light from the other, it serves as an accurate traffic register, saving the work of a special policeman, or other attendant, for the task. The counting is done as the passing automobiles interrupt the beam of light to the cell. Their shadow causes sufficient reaction to operate an automatic counter.

Retain Colonial Uniform

The Connecticut Foot Guards wear the same type uniforms as worn in Colonial days. The City Troop of Philadelphia is another Colonial organization still in existence.

Next Clinic At Olive Bridge

The next clinic at Olive Bridge for immunizing the children against diphtheria will be held on Saturday afternoon, June 11, instead of Friday. All children are urged to be present and to be on time. This will be the last clinic for many of the children. The rest of the children will receive their second treatment this week and the last treatment next Saturday.

Morocco a Safe Country

The days of roughing it, exploration, freedom of action, are gone—as far as Morocco is concerned. Fifteen years ago a man could take a pack outfit and a bunch of natives and go wherever fancy led. No more; the French and Spanish are in control, says Adventure Magazine.

Morocco is not, nor ever has been, dangerous to a foreigner who attends to his own business and doesn't act like a fool toward the natives. One can't insult a man in America without taking a chance of getting licked or killed for it. The same applies in Morocco and everywhere else. There has never been an "open season" on foreigners. All that wild news of the last 20 years has been European propadanda intended to warrant foreign control of the country.

Only a Dream

Hubby listened intently. His wife and her mother were talking. The latter was saying:

"You have indeed secured a splendid husband, and I think you ought to treat him with a little more tact and consideration. Don't always want to know where he is going, and if he comes home a little late be agreeable and wait until he explains before you begin asking a lot of awkward questions. He's just the sort to appreciate any generosity on your part. Be kind to him."

Hubby stirred uneasily, trying to hear more, when—he awoke.

The ice man is reading up books on politeness and courtesy.

The 5-cent cigar has come back. This is very evident.

What China needs is a question like bobbed hair to take its mind off war.

"Alienated" affections usually appear not to have been very strong in the first place.
